"PLOT TO RUIN ME," SAYS GORE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 16.—"This is a plot to destroy me," said United States Senator Thomas P. Gore, as he took the witness stand today to defend himself in the trial of Mrs. Minnie E. Bond's $50,000 damage suit against him.

Mrs. Bond has charged the blind Senator with attempting to attack her in a hotel room in Washington.

The evidence of the prosecution is in. Senator Gore's testimony was relied on by the defence to break down the case and win an acquittal.

Sitting far out in his chair, his hands folded firmly across the knob of his cane, his sightless eyes staring straight ahead, his brown features set in a look of determination, Senator Gore awaited the questions.

"There was not a sound in the court room except the voice of the questioner and the Senator's answers.

Senator Gore said he was born in Mississippi. He had lived in Oklahoma since 1901. He had been blind since he was eleven years old. He testified he met Mrs. Bond at the Marvin Hotel, Oklahoma City, in January, 1913, and that she said her husband wanted to be collector of internal revenue, but he told her he was already committed and could not support him.

KNOWS EARP AND JACOBS.

Mr. Gore said he did not suggest that she bring her husband's application to Washington. He said his Washington office was in the Senatorial annex and that he had three clerks and a messenger in the office.

"Do you know Dr. Earp and Jim Jacobs?" he was asked.

"Yes," replied Gore.

"Do you know whether Earp wanted a job?"

"Yes, sir. He wanted to be United States marshal for the Western district."

"When did you know these people were in Washington?"

"I heard Mrs. Bond was there two days after inauguration."

"Did Mrs. Bond ever come to your office about her husband's application?"

"Yes. About ten days after inauguration. She came in and asked me if I could not consider her husband's candidacy. I told her I could do nothing. Then she said: 'Then, Senator, you can't hold out any hope?' I said, 'No.'"

MADE NO ADVANCES.

"Did you make any advances to her, such as holding her hand or touching her foot?"

"Most positively not."

"When did you next hear from Mrs. Bond?"

"She called me on the 'phone a few days later. She asked me if I could come down to her hotel to see her. I told her I could not. She next called up at my residence Easter morning. She wanted me to come down to see her then. She asked

New Haven Officials Are Ready for Trial

STAMFORD, Ct., Feb. 16.—It is probable that counsel for C. S. Mellen, former president; E. H. McHenry, former vice-president, and the four other officials of the New Haven road who are charged with manslaughter in consequence of the deaths resulting from the fatal wreck at Westport, will be in the criminal superior court at Bridgeport tomorrow, prepared to take action with reference to the cases. Homer S. Cummings, of counsel for the accused, said today: "We do not expect to submit to further continuance of the cases."

Dudley Field Malone Down With the Grip

Hold Aged Man for Stabbing Woman

Tobia Preziosi, seventy-six, who was arraigned Saturday in Arlington, charged with stabbing his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Anna Preziosi, of Wilson avenue, Somerville, pleaded not guilty in the Somerville District Court today, and his case was continued to February 25. He was held in $5,000 bonds.

TSING TAO, China, Feb. 16.—The Hamburg-American liner Saxonia went ashore today in a dense fog. The vessel's position is not dangerous and she will probably be refloated after her cargo is discharged.

DENOUNCE CURLEY AS FALSIFIER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—"Mayor Curley's statement that Secretary Daniels had promised to award the contract of the new supply ship to the Charlestown navy yard, if the revised bid was within the naval board's estimate, is in line with other irresponsible statements he has made recently," said one of the high officials of the navy department in the absence of the secretary.

"Some weeks ago he chose to give out a statement quoting Secretary Daniels as saying the Boston yard would get the ship if he came to Washington as Mayor of Boston and sought it.

"It was a deliberate misrepresentation of a humorous exchange of courtesies over the telephone, and was used by Mayor Curley for political purposes. The secretary has denied the deliberate, false interpretation he put on the remark," said this official.

"A week ago he gave out a statement to the effect that the Navy Department had assured him the Boston yard would get the contract and that work would begin within sixty days. No such information was ever given out by any one clothed with authority to make it.

"The latest statement attributed to the Mayor is probably similar to the others, although in the absence of the secretary I am not in the position to give it an authoritative denial."

Marlboro's Veteran Postmaster Dead

MARLBORO, Feb. 16.—John S. Fay, one of the oldest postmasters in point of service in the country, died here, aged seventy-four years. He was postmaster at Marlboro for forty-nine years. Mr. Fay was a Mayflower descendant and a veteran of the Civil War. He was born in the town of Berlin, Mass., the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Fay.

Garment Workers Report a Lockout

Forty garment workers at the Federal court shop of the Boston Tailoring Company, and twenty others in four small shops at the North End, were locked out today, according to reports to their unions. The agreement entered into by the United Garment Workers' Union and the Boston manufacturers of men's clothing expired a week ago. The workers contend that it is still in effect, as no other agreement has been made to supplant it.

Viscount Aoki, Jap Friend of U. S., Dead

TOKIO, Feb. 16.—Viscount Aoki, the first Japanese ambassador to the United States, died here today, aged seventy years. The Viscount was always a friend of America and sought to further the bonds of peace between Japan and the United States. He was recalled in 1908 because it is said he was attempting to institute negotiations between the two countries for a mutual guarantee of territorial rights.

CURLEY CAN'T COERCE BANKS, KANE DECLARES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today stated that he had not been informed officially of the charge that Mayor Curley of Boston was coercing national banks in that city to contribute to a business fund.

"Curley can't coerce any national bank," said Mr. Kane. "National banks have no right to use their surplus or profit for anything except legal expenses, losses and dividends, unless the stockholders agree. This department would not permit any such proposition if complaint were made. We have not heard any complaint from the banks in that locality or from J. E. Brennan, the national bank examiner in that district."

Mr. Kane said that he would not inquire into the condition of affairs unless some official representations were made to the Comptroller's office.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—With the thermometer at 6 degrees below zero and the streets filled with deep drifts of snow, the entire fire department was called out early today to fight two fires in the heart of the manufacturing and business [illegible], causing a loss of $200,000.

SUFFRAGISTS STORM STATE HOUSE HALLS

The fight for women's suffrage in the Massachusetts Legislature opened today with a hearing by the Legislative Committee on Constitutional Amendments.

GATHER FOR STRUGGLE.

Suffragists and anti-suffragists were out in force. For two hours before the doors opened women partisans of both sides were waiting in the State House corridor outside Room 431, where the hearing was scheduled to be held. It was shifted to Room [illegible] where there would be room for all those anxious to hear or be heard. There were fully 300 men and women at the hearing.

There are two bills before the House, each of which strikes the word "male" from the qualifications of voters. There is also under consideration that part of Governor Walsh's inaugural address which urges woman suffrage.

Favoring these bills appeared representatives of the Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage Association, the Massachusetts Political Equality Association, some labor organizations, and the Progressive and Socialist leaders. In addition, woman workers throughout Boston have organized to support the bills.

The anti-suffrage forces were prepared for a desperate fight. Miss Lucy Price of Cleveland, one of the leading anti-suffrage workers in the country, was here as a principal speaker and was supported by Mrs. James A. Parker.

For the suffragists an imposing phalanx appeared. There were Professor Ellen Hayes of Wellesley, prominent socialist and suffragist; Miss Anne Page, president of the Radcliffe College Suffrage Association; Mrs. Robert S. Fuller, Mrs. Thomas H. Gray, Jr., Mrs. John Leonard, Mrs. Charles Park, Miss Katharine Morey, Mrs. Richard D. Coe, Miss Dorothy Power, Mrs. J. A. Rice, Mrs. William H. Wheelwright, Mrs. B. W. Castle and Miss Maud M. Daniels.

The first speaker, Henry Sterling of the legislative committee of the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, said that he wished to record organized labor in favor of the bill to strike the word "male" from the constitutional qualifications of voters.

The Socialist party of Massachusetts represented by Fred D. Chase expressed itself in favor of suffrage. Mr. Chase was followed by Miss Morey.

WALKER FAVORS BILL.

Hon. Joseph Walker of the legislative committee of the Progressive party of Massachusetts favored the bills. Letters were [illegible] Sherman L. Whipple and [illegible] Governor John L. Bates, favoring suffrage.

Mrs. Teresa A. Crowley, chairman of the legislative committee of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association said:

"We are told [illegible] represented—virtually [illegible] wishes are consulted, [illegible] they can get anything they ask for. Well, a good many of us [illegible] the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association represents [illegible] at the present [illegible] been asking for the vote [illegible]. But putting that aside, I cannot understand how a woman [illegible] when [illegible]. If the wishes of [illegible] weight [illegible].

POINT TO OTHER STATES.

"We are no longer asking you, as the early suffragists were obliged to do, to take a leap in the dark. We have only to point to those States and countries where equal suffrage has been in successful operation for many years.

"Equal suffrage has spread from State to neighbor State. Unless we assume that the Western men are fools, we can take it for granted that those who have seen suffrage in actual operation, who know it from experience and not from theory, are satisfied that it is a success."

Mrs. Gertrude Halliday Leonard of Chestnut Hill quoted Professor E. B. Wilson, Dr. Simon Flexner, Professor James Harvey Robinson and others to show that women are capable of exercising judicial judgment and are not physically incapable of voting wisely.

Former Councillor Guy Ham appeared in favor of submitting the question to the voters. He said:

"I consider that the Republican party made one of its gravest errors when it defeated this proposition on the floor of the House last year."

Mrs. William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., said:

"People who are against suffrage for women sometimes express the fear that if women voted it would weaken their devotion to their homes and children. I have even heard very prejudiced people say that the suffrage ranks are filled with unmarried women or those who are disappointed and childless.

"I was interested to find that the

Don't Junk That Old Machine

There is always a demand for usable machinery, and any machine that can be used is worth more than scrap iron. Maybe some fellow is looking for that very machine you'd like to dispose of.

Of course, this fellow would be hard for YOU to find, but the American can locate him in a jiffy, and if the machine and the price you ask match up properly, you'll make a sale.

The "Machinery" column in the American's "Want Ad" pages is watched closely by both buyers and sellers of machinery and tools of all kinds. Many profitable transactions have their origin there.

If you have any machinery to sell or want to buy anything in that line, write a "Want Ad" and leave with any of the American's "Want Ad" stations, the branch office at 264 Washington street, Main Office at 80 Summer street, or LOSES VOTE BY TRIP.

Mrs. [illegible] of Colorado, said:

"I was born and brought up in [illegible] a State which twenty years ago declared that her women should have the same rights and privileges that her men enjoyed. Ever since I was old enough I have voted at every municipal, State, national and county election held in Colorado. About a year and a half ago my husband's business made it necessary for us to leave the West and come to Boston. Because I have passed over a few State boundary lines, I am disfranchised.

"I look forward to casting my first ballot with all the eagerness, I am sure, with which a boy looks forward to the time when he shall take his place in the world as a full-grown citizen. There came to be the keen realization of responsibility of the individual to society which comes to the man when he begins to take an active part in the affairs which concern the general welfare. Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, one of Colorado's great women, when once asked what the vote meant to her, replied: 'The vote is an indefinable something that makes you part of the plan of the world. You never ask a boy, "Have you purified politics and driven all the political tricksters out of the State?" You put your hand on his shoulder and say, "Today, my boy, you are an American citizen," and that is what you say to your daughter in Colorado.'"

Apathy Shown to Anti-Trust Bills

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The business men of the nation have failed to take the active interest in congressional hearings on anti-trust measures that President Wilson had anticipated. There is a general apathy which was unexpected at the White House.

The President believes this to be due to the fact that the measures were more or less discounted by advance reports and that there is a general impression that they will pass in much the same form in which they were introduced.

me if I could see her next day. I told her possibly I could.

"She called me at my office at 1 o'clock. She again asked me to her hotel. I suggested that she come to my office. She said she was afraid there would be too great a crowd at my office to come to her hotel. I asked me to come to her hotel. I told her I could not at that time. Then she asked me if I would drop by the hotel on my way home. I said possibly I could.

"Had you ever at any time been in the Winston Hotel before?"

"I never had."

"MRS. BOND MET ME."

"You know nothing about the architecture of the hotel with regard to location of parlors and rooms?"

"No, sir."

"What happened when you entered the lobby of the hotel?"

"Mrs. Bond met me in the lobby and said: 'I will take charge of the Senator.' She started towards the elevator and I asked her where we were going. She said she would take me to a parlor."

"After getting on the second floor she said the parlor was crowded and she would take me to her room. She seated me in a rocking chair."

"What was the first thing she said to you?"

"She remarked that she was disappointed in her husband's failure to land the office. I told her I was sorry. Then I remarked that she might miss her train, as she told me she was going on the [illegible] train.

"I rose to go and extended my hand. She remarked she had decided not to go. I sat down. Then she suggested she might herself become a candidate for commissioner of charities and corrections. Then she suggested I would have bitter opposition in my race for the Senate.

"SET UP AN OUTCRY."

"Then she had a 'phone call and talked for some time. When she came back she sat down on the bed. I talked for a few minutes more.

"I told her I would have to be going. I rose and extended my hand. She seized it and pulled me toward her. I asked her what it meant. I was off balance and probably was leaning over Mrs. Bond.

"Then I heard some one come in and I asked who it was. The man answered: 'T. E. Roberston.' Mrs. Bond set up an outcry and Robertson told her to stop that squalling. Then he went to Mrs. Bond and said: 'What have you to say about this?' She said: 'I do not want Bond to know you were in my room.'

"Then I turned to Robertson and asked him what this meant. He mumbled out something that he did not know anything. I asked Robertson to take me down and he did."

"Did you make advances to this woman?"

"I did not."

"Then you went home?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did Dr. Earp call on you the next day?"

"I think it was the next day."

"Dr. Earp," the senator continued, "suggested something he had heard to the import that I had assaulted Mrs. Bond. I told him if persons said that, it was an infamous lie."

"I'll ask you if you authorized Dr. Earp to settle this matter for you?"

"I did not."

"You did not instruct him to get her out of town?"

"No, sir."

"Did Earp come back?"

"Yes, the next day."

"What did he say?"

"He intimated that other witnesses had seen the affair. He said he would try to get Mrs. Bond out of town. I said it made no difference to me; that I could not understand a man who could send his wife on an infamous mission like this."

"Did you know that Jacobs was in the next room?"

"I did not."

"Fitzpatrick?"

"No, sir, I heard of these men in connection with the affair four days later.

REFUSED ENDORSEMENTS.

"Do you know whether Fitzpatrick was an applicant for office?"

"He was. He wanted to be Attorney General for the Secretary of the Interior. I refused him my endorsement."

"When Dr. Earp made known to you his ambition to become marshal what occurred then?"

"I told him there was not much hope. I told Jacobs the same thing."

"Did you ever have any conversation with Senators or the Vice-President about this affair?"

"I did not."

Fashion Has Decreed

We have seen corset boning change from armor plate to thin flexible strips following the contour of the figure as it gives the necessary support.

Redfern Corsets

Perhaps they are a little advanced, a little ahead of the common corset styles, but come and see how light and soft they are. Our expert fitters will demonstrate to you what an advance they are over the rigid straight front clasps of the past.

Dress fashions demand curved clasps to set off "the clothing of woman according to the lines of her figure," as the French essayist Montaigne says, and it is only in Redfern models that you can get the true normal curved front models.

We illustrate style 7205 at 5.00. Other styles at 3.00 to 6.00.

SULLIVAN TANGO BILL IS FOUGHT BY MRS. PAGE

Mrs. Christina D. Page of the Back Bay today announced that she would head a delegation of representative women of the city and go to the State House to support the bill introduced by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester prohibiting improper modern dances.

Widespread interest has been stirred by the demonstration of the tango and kindred dances given under the auspices of the Boston AMERICAN to members of the Legislature at Le Petit Trianon on Saturday evening.

The Sulivan bill is aimed at "any dance not conductive to propriety." It specifically forbids the tango, Argentine, lame-duck, chicken-flip and others of the new dances. After the exhibition Saturday night, Mr. Sullivan said:

DANCES ALL RIGHT.

"Those dances are all right. The troubles comes when they are perverted by poor dancers in the public dance halls."

Mrs. Page said today:

"Representative Sullivan's anti-animal dance bill is one of the best measures dealing with public morals ever introduced in the Legislature. It meets with my heartiest approval and I shall so state when it comes up for a committee hearing.

"I know a number of other women who agree with me on this important matter. I look for an emphatic demand from them that the bill pass in its present form.

BELIEVES IN DANCING.

"This bill is not a prim persons' measure. Neither am I favoring it on old maidish notions, for I believe in dancing. The lessons taught in a properly conducted ballroom are invaluable to any man or to any woman.

"Barnyard prancing, animal-like behavior, or high kickers in skirts, on the other hand, can't be said to help anyone, in or outside of a dance hall.

"The bunny-hug, the tango, and all the other animal dances aimed at in Representative Sullivan's bill not only are brutalizing, but are ungraceful. A girl's etiquette, her walk, her appearance, all suffer by reason of having been taught such disgusting practices.

"I wish Representative Sullivan had gone further in this matter. He might have provided for the teaching of the etiquette of the reception and the ball room in our public schools. For, after all, the school is the proper place to mould the ideas of our boys and our girls."

Atlanta Bishop Attacks Eliot

Bay State Men for Small Loans Reform

Joseph Shattuck and Ralph P. Alden of Springfield are among the incorporators of the Industrial Finance Corporation, with $6,000,000 capital, which has secured papers at Richmond, Va., for the purpose of correcting small loans evils throughout the country by making it possible for deserving persons of small means to borrow money at reasonable rates and without collateral. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler and Vincent Astor are other incorporators.

Admits Buying Cow With Bad Check

Colleton R. B. Hill, an eighteen-year-old boy, pleaded guilty to buying a cow from Morris Levenson of No. 22 Michaels place, Chelsea—paying with a worthless check for $77.50—and re-selling the cow to a Reading butcher for $40. He was given six months, but on offering to make good was placed on probation.

Man Admits Gem Theft in Chelsea

George Williams pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and the larceny of jewels worth $22 from John Vorkofsky of No. 38 Medford street, Chelsea, in the Chelsea Court today. He was held in $500 while his case was investigated.

Ouch! Backache Rub Lame Back

Rub Pain Away With a Small Trial Bottle of Old "St. Jacobs Oil"

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right into your back, and by the time you count fifty the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the ache and pain right out and ends the misery. It is magical yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica and lame back misery so promptly and surely. It never disappoints!

NOW RETURN TO EMPIRE DAYS IN PARIS STYLES

PARIS, Feb. 16.—A return to the empire styles in women's dress was the keynote of the new fashions exhibited at the opening day of the season for Spring fashion at the Autueil race meeting.

The merveilleuses of last year have given place to the incroyables of Napoleonic days in short waists and strong colors, and especially blues and wide stripes of blue and yellow in a new woolen material that looks like heavy silk to the untrained eye.

Unusually short skirts caught up at the back are a marked feature, which form a pleasant change from the styles worn for several months past.

Plain colors are practically banished, except in very violent sulphur or blue mixed with violet. In these cases the material is a new cloth called "French flannel," which has the weight almost of ratine and the finish of flannel.

One of the most admired gowns was a sulphur flannel, the skirt adorned with three flounces, perfectly flat in front with circular sides and back. The coat was very short, made of striped cloth, with two pleats at back held in place by two buttons. It showed a white waist coat fastened by a single pearl.

A Spanish cape coat of heavy satin carried across the shoulders and secured by ribbons under the arms, after the fashion of the parade cloak of Napoleon's life guards, is another novelty that bids fair to have an extraordinary vogue.

The cloak which is called the Toreador cape, has a wide turnover collar of Roman striped silk, and is lined with chiffon of various pastel hues, such as pale mustard, vieux, rose, etc.

Except for these general characteristics, the new fashions appear to leave much scope for individual tastes, and freaks promise to be as plentiful as ever this year.

A revised edition of the harem skirt is popular among well-dressed women. It is an ordinary skirt, very tight at the hem, but when the wearer walks it becomes apparent that her ankles pass through two separate openings pinned in soft rolls. This device gives greater liberty of movement.

A flutter of excitement was caused by the appearance of a smart looking, tall girl wearing a white velvet mask in the fashion of Venice in the palmy days of the republic. She strolled about leisurely, wearing the most daring directorate gown ever seen on a Paris race course.

In its general lines it exemplified the tendency of tomorrow's fashions, inasmuch as it had a V-shaped opening at the neck and a slash in the skirt revealed chiffon tango garters.

The greatest novelty in jewels is to wear unmounted stones actually stuck to the skin of the neck by means of a special adhesive preparation.

Start Probe of $8000 Quincy Fire

Investigation of the origin of a fire in the upper floors of the Adams Building, Quincy, which caused a damage of $8,000, was started today. Mrs. Emma E. Monark, who was rescued from the burning building and who suffered a shock, is in a serious condition at the Quincy Hospital.

BEHOLD THE 'TROUSER TROTTER,' LATEST OF PARISIAN FASHIONS

Two views of the first "trouser-trotter" suit for women imported to America. The narrow skirt is slit up to the knees on each side, exposing a pair of trousers, creased and cuffed man-style and falling gracefully over neat patent-leather shoes.

The first "trouser-trotter" suit for women has arrived from Paris.

The trousers are not only made of serge, but are manishly creased. The only thing deceptive about them is that they are not regular trousers. They only go to the knees, where they are held by elastic bands.

Mme. Bernard, a dressmaker, brought in the first "trousers-trotter." She said that it would soon be accepted by all fashionable American women, because it is warm as well as discreet.

"Parisian women of the fashionable set are never vulgar," she said. "They do not believe in showing their ankles. Moreover, they are very sensible, as this new idea of fashion shows. The trousers not only serve the purpose of delicacy, but they shield the wearer from the chills that the slit skirt provokes."

Democratic Women Voters Organize

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The National Democratic Association of Women Voters was announced today as the latest entry into the political and suffrage field. As announced by its chairman, Mrs. Charles Morton, the object of the association is to carry on suffrage campaigns within the Democratic party and attempt to prevent the nomination of any Democrat who is not suffrage advocate.

Father Brett Will Be Buried Tomorrow

Arrangements have been completed for the funeral of the Rev. William P. Brett, S. J., for many years attached to Boston College as professor of ethics and political economy, who died at the Carney Hospital, following a serious operation performed recently.

Father Brett was one of the most brilliant men of the Jesuit order in America. According to present arrangements, the body will be taken to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Harrison avenue, today and placed in one of the chapels, where it will remain until the funeral services tomorrow morning.

LORUL BATES DEFENDED BY SPIRIT WIFE

HAVERHILL, Feb. 16.—Awaiting his arraignment in court, scheduled for today, on a charge of neglecting to provide for his wife and the infant that smothered to death in its mother's arms as she [illegible] to keep it from freezing, Lorul M. Bates expressed himself as confident of acquittal.

Mrs. Rose [illegible] Manning, known to the neighbors as Bates' "spirit wife," has not been subpoenaed, but was registered at a local hotel and expected to appear as a volunteer witness in Bates' behalf.

Mrs. Manning visited Bates in his cell. He passed her a note through the bars for his wife. Thirteen-year-old Grace Manning—known as "Little Mother" in the Bates family—took the note to Mrs. Bates, later returning to the hotel to stay with her mother.

There were but three mourners at the funeral of the three-months-old baby smothered during the zero temperature of Friday. These were Mrs. Bates, Miss Lilla B. Bates and Roger Bates, sister and brother of the imprisoned man. The child's body will be sent to Kingston for interment.

What were the contents of the note sent by Bates to his wife can only be surmised. Following her refusal to see him Saturday, it came as a surprise to the police when, after receiving the note, she telephoned them that she intended to visit her husband.

The expected visit, however, did not materialize. Mrs. Bates, with her four children, remained at the local Young Women's Christian Association rooms, where they are being cared for.

Bates' arrest Saturday was made at the request of his own brother and sister. Judge John J. Ryan has been engaged by Roger Bates to conduct the prosecution when the case is called today. There has yet been no intimation that Lorul Bates will be represented by counsel.

Mrs. Manning, who lives at No. 36 Pinckney street, Boston, declared she was not a spiritualist. She declared her relations with the family based on friendship only.

Vice-President Sends Apology

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Vice-President Marshall recently voiced his annoyance over the fact that one Thomas R. Marshall, formerly of Ohio, who conducts a restaurant and saloon in Washington, is being confused with him in the delivery of mail. The Vice-President said he would either have to change his name or go into the "gin business." Now the Vice-President sends an apology to his namesake, who resented the sneer.

Dunwoody Leaves $3,000,000 to School

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 16.—In disposing of an $8,000,000 estate, the will of William Hood Dunwoody, prominent miller, designates $3,000,000 for the establishment and maintenance of an industrial school here. In his many years in flour milling Mr. Dunwoody had observed the tendency of graduates to seek the office end when entering the milling business.

1525 Grams Weight of Bertillon's Brain

PARIS, Feb. 16.—The brain of Alphonse Bertillon, creator of the system of criminal identification which brought him fame, weighed 1525 grams. The weight of the brain of the average man is 1400 grams, according to the announcement of Dr. Leonce Manouvrier of the College of France.

Mrs Sherwood, Writer, Dies

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Mrs. Kate Brownlee Sherwood, wife of Representative Isaac R. Sherwood of Ohio, author and writer, and one of the pioneers of women's work in [illegible] Army [illegible], is dead here.

Edwin T. Nichols, Old Skipper, Dead

Captain Edwin T. Nichols, [illegible] the last of the masters of the [illegible] sailing ships, [illegible] at the home of his son, [illegible] Edwin R. Nichols, No. [illegible] avenue. Captain Nichols was master of a number of ships engaged in trading between Atlantic ports, the West Indies, Africa, the China seas and English ports, and was very successful. Mr. Nichols is the father of [illegible] Nichols of the AMERICAN staff.

Carolina Hotels Bar Evelyn Thaw

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Feb. 16.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who arrived here for a theatrical performance, was unable to secure hotel accommodations and spent the night in a sleeping car in the railroad yards. None of the other members of her company was thus inconvenienced. At every hotel at which she applied for lodging she was told there were no rooms to spare.

DISCOVER JAP PLOT TO SEIZE THE MIKADO

TOKIO, Feb. 16.—Pamphlets declaring for an uprising against the government and urging the seizing of the Mikado, were confiscated by the police today when they raided several meeting places where speakers were exhorting their hearers to tak drastic action against the government on account of the naval corruption scandal.

Thousands of troops are on guard at the palace and the administration buildings, while thousands of others are patrolling the streets and dispersing all gatherings of the inflamed populace.

Reports that the court-martial of Vice-Admiral Fuji, formerly Japanese naval attache at Berlin, and Captain Sawasaki would result in a whitewash of these officials added fuel to the flames.

The opposition to the present ministry is growing, but the premier declared today that he would not resign until the naval scandal had been thoroughly probed. He stated that the government was investigating all the facts to determine whether the corruption was general in naval circles or whether it was only isolated in certain quarters.

Members of the Diet are also coming in for the wrath of the people. Many of them have had narrow escapes from the infuriated populace and today the members were guarded by police and troops when they left their homes and the parliament buildings.

INQUIRY ON VIVISECTION OF INFANTS

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Aroused by the disclosure of practices in New York City hospitals, which have resulted either through innoculation with serums or as a result of carelessness and poor sanitation in little children becoming infected with a loathsome blood disease, Commissioner Kingsbury of the Department of Charities and Goldwater of the Department of Health today begins investigations for the purpose of correcting conditions.

"It is true of the private as well as the city hospitals," said Commissioner Kingsbury, "that children enter these institutions suffering from minor ailments and while there become infected with shocking diseases.

"I was never more shocked in all my life than when I first learned of these conditions. The little daughter of a very dear friend of mine was taken to Riverside Hospital, on North Brother Island, suffering from one of the contagious diseases to which children are subjected, and was brought back to her home a victim of a vile disease. I investigated the matter then, and was amazed to find that many other children had become infected in the same way."

Commissioner Kingsbury said he was not aware that the "luetin emulsion," Dr. Noguchi's extract of germs, was being used experimentally in hospitals which are under the jurisdiction of the Department of Charities. The Riverside and Willard Parker Hospitals, he said, are connected with the Department of Health.

QUESTION OF PARENTS' CONSENT.

"That is a question I will look into at once," said the commissioner when asked if physicans of the city hospitals will in the future be permitted to inoculate children with luetin or tuberculin serums without the consent of their parents or guardians, when such tests are made for experimental purposes.

Commissioner Goldwater of the Department of Health said:

"While I am in hearty sympathy with the medical research work being carried on at the Rockefeller Institute, I am certain opposed to children being used as subjects for experiments, either with or without the consent of their parents or guardians.

"I am not informed that any such experiments are being made in the Department of Health hospitals, but I can assure you that no such practices will be tolerated during my administration. It is a question which will receive immediate attention."

"We are getting our children into separate wards," the commissioner continued, "as fast as we possibly can. The next thing is to provide, as Mr. Wright recommended, a large, ample children's service, where experts in children's diseases may give them the care and attention they deserve."

Additional cases of infection of children with a vile blood disease in Riverhead, Willard Parker and other city hospitals were brought to light through the investigators of the Vivisection Investigation League. The charges will be backed up by affidavits which are to be placed before the Senate Judiciary Committee in Albany on February 24, when Senator Herrick's bill for the appointment of a commission for the investigation of human and animal vivisection in Rockefeller Institute and public hospitals of the State and city comes up for a public hearing.

Three children of a Bronx family, one suffering from measles and two from scarlet fever, were sent to the Riverside Hospital on North Brothers Island after a short stay in the Willard Parker Hospital. When they were returned from the institutions they had developed a vile blood disease, which, in turn, was communicated to three other children of the family.

LAWSON OFFERS $50,000 TO CITY CONDITIONALLY

Thomas W. Lawson was on record at City Hall today as offering $50,000 to swell Mayor Curley's "Boom Boston" fund, providing Curley will have the city buy for a park a lot of land he purchased from the old Roxbury Company in 1901.

If Curley will do this, Lawson guarantees the abuttors will contribute an additional $50,000. He adds in part:

"There was hue and cry against this land being sold for private building and a movement was started to have the city purchase it for a public park. The Roxbury Company, public-spiritedly, priced the land at its assessment valuation. At the last minute the plan fell through, and the land was about to pass into private hands when, at the solicitation of the Mayor and abuttors and because of their emphatic assurance that if the land could be held for another year the city would surely carry out its plan, I purchased the property.

"If you can secure a purchaser from your 'Boom Boston' public-spirited contributors or anywhere, without any restriction as to its use, I will donate $50,000 to your 'Boom Boston' fund."

Secretary Francis G. Goodale of the Massachusetts Single Tax League, in an open letter to the Mayor, declares that exempting land improvements from taxation would be "a much more permanent and effective way to build up Boston" than the proposed million-dollar fund.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Congress has the roads question under thorough discussion. From the committee on roads of the House of Representatives there emerged a measure in which was embodied a consensus of opinion of the committee as a whole. The bill was passed with considerable expedition by the House, for it had been drafted quite skillfully in order to obtain a great amount of support from the thickly populated States. Two courses of action are left to the States in availing themselves of roads appropriations from the central source. A State can employ its quota of the $25,00,000, the distribution of which is based upon population and rural free delivery routes, in the construction and maintenance of whatever roads may be determined upon by its highway department in co-operation with the Secretary of Agriculture.

The all-around superiority of motor trucks for the delivery of petroleum products, whether in the form of fuel oils or grease, is attested by the rapidity with which the great oil companies are supplanting horse-drawn tank wagons with motor equipment.

The Atlantic Refining Company, which is the leading distributer of oil in Eastern Pennsylvania, has consistently purchased motor trucks and extended its business by reason of the better service which motors enable the company to give. With the establishment of each new oil station a tank truck is assigned to cover its territory. This company now operates eighty-four White trucks, having taken delivery of three 1½ ton Whites a few days ago.

The increase in weight of motorcycles with the advent of speed change gears, electric starters, and other improvements has occasioned the use of heavier and better tires. "We early saw that the motorcycle was to have more of the characteristics of an automobile than of a bicycle," says Horace DeLisser, of the Ajax tire makers. "We, therefore, built motorcycle tires as we did motor car tires, rather than attempt to build up a bicycle tire to the heavier weight and higher speed work. The success of Ajax motorcycle tires, in the now more difficult service, justifies the early thought."

Says Roosevelt Will Win by 200,000

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 16.—Ex-Senator Frederick M. Davenport, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor on the Progressive ticket in 1912, is convinced that Theodore Roosevelt will be the next Governor of New York. He says he can be elected by a 200,000 lead.

WILSON SEES ONLY SUNSHINE FOR BUSINESS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—President Wilson is optimistic over business conditions in the United States. He told the newspaper correspondents today that reports received by him showed that conditions were improving. He stated that these reports were almost unanimous.

The President does not regard the conditions of unemployment prevailing in New York and other cities as being at all unusual for this period of the year. He let it be known today that reports of 250,000 men being out of employment in New York were hearsay and not based on an official investigation.

Turning to a discussion of foreign affairs the President said the recognition of the provisional government of Peru by the United States was given only after he was assured that it had the support of all constitutional authorities of that nation.

"There is no possible analogy between recognition of the Peruvian government and the Huerta government in Mexico," he said. President Wilson has received much evidence that his Mexican policy has the support of the South American republics. He regards this as one of the most gratifying developments of our international relations. There is nothing contrary to the Monroe doctrine in the dispatching of marines and guns to Mexico City by the British government, the President indicated. The consent of the United States was asked before this action was taken, but it was not necessary.

Emphatic denial was made by the President of reports that Secretary of Agriculture Houston would leave the Cabinet and become a member of the Federal Reserve Board.

ANNE SHEAFE HAILED AS NEW TENNIS STAR

Boston has a new tennis star, hailed by many as the coming woman champion, in Miss Anne Sheafe of Brookline. The first public demonstration of her ability to handle a racquet was given society on Saturday when she defeated Eleonora Sears at the exhibition tournament, held to celebrate the opening of the Longwood covered courts.

With her partner, Richard N. Williams of Philadelphia, she own the mixed double series, in which such well-known players as Miss Marion Fenno, Alfred S. Dabney, N. W. Niles, and C. F. Watson of New York were her opponents.

She proved herself a capable master of all fine points in the game. She played with a dash and freedom that won the hearts of her spectators. Once she picked a difficult shot from the side and sent it far and high beyond her opponent's reach. It won a game.

Her forehand drives are swift and powerful, easily the feature of her play. In service and play close under the net she is an adept. Eye, hand and foot moved together as she lunged and placed her replies.

She is a decidedly pretty girl, still in her teens, and has charming brown hair that curls down over her forehead and about her eyes. She smiles as she plays, but shows a tiny little frown while waiting for a game to begin.

The chief consolation Miss Eleonora Sears found after her defeat was when she said, "Well, it wasn't a championship." Mutual friends predict that there will be a great exhibition next Summer when the two play together in singles. Miss Eleonora has been through several season matches at Newport and will not suffer a defeat to go long unrevenged if she can help it.

Edwin Sheafe, Miss Sheafe's father, lives at No. 573 Hammond street, Brookline. He is a member of the Puritan and Country clubs and has a real estate business in Boston.

More of the same kind there was, all music to my ears, and then Father Dan came to closer quarters, saying Doctor Conrad had dropped a hint that I was not very happy.

"Tell your old priest everything, my child, and if there is anything he can do . . ."

Without waiting for more words I sank to my knees at his feet, and poured out all my troubles—telling him my marriage had been a failure; that the sanctifying grace which he had foretold as the result of the sacrament of holy wedlock had not come to pass; that not only did I not love my husband, but my husband loved another woman, who was living here with us in this very house.

Father Dan was dreadfully distressed. More than once while I was speaking he crossed himself and said, "Lord and His Holy Mother love us;" and when I came to an end he began to reproach himself for everything, saying that he ought to have known that our lad (meaning Martin) did not write those terrible letters without being certain they were true, and that from the first day my husband came to our parish the sun had been darkened by his shadow.

"I CAN'T BEAR IT."

"But take care," he said, "I've told nobody about the compact we made with your husband—nobody but our Blessed Lady herself—and you mustnt think of that as a way out of your marriage. No, nor of any other way, no matter what, which the world, and the children of the world, may talk about."

"But I can't bear it; I can't bear it," I cried.

"Hush! Hush! Don't say that, my daughter. Think of it as one of the misfortunes of life which we all have to suffer. How many poor women have to bear the sickness and poverty, not to speak of the drunkenness and death, of their husbands! Do they think they have a right to run away from all that—to break the sacred vows of their marriage on account of it? No, my child, no, and neither must you. Some day it will all come right. You'll see it will. And meantime by the memory of your mother—that blessed saint whom the Lord has made one of his own . . ."

"Then what can I do?"

"Pray, my child, pray for strength to bear your trials and to resist all temptation. Say a rosary for the Blessed Virgin every morning before breaking your fast. I'll say a rosary, too. You'll see yet this is only God's love for you, and you'll welcome His holy will."

While my dear father and friend was counselling me so I heard my husband speaking in his loud, grating tones on the landing outside, and before I could rise from my knees he had burst open the door and entered the room.

His face was deadly white and he was like a man out of his right mind.

"Mary," he said, looking down at me where I knelt with my hands crossed on my bosom, "when did I give you permission to introduce a priest into my house? Isn't it enough for a man to have a wife who is a Catholic without having the church and its ministers shunted into his home without his permission?"

COULD NOT SPEAK.

I was so taken aback by this furious assault that at first I could not speak, but Father Dan interposed to defend me, saying with beautiful patience, that his visit had been quite unexpected on my part, and that I had asked him to stay overnight only because he was an old man, and had had a long walk from his parish.

"I'm much obliged to your reverence," said my husband, who was quivering with fury, "but my wife is perfectly capable of answering for herself without your assistance, and as for your parish you would have done better to stay there instead of coming to meddle in this one."

"Aren't you measurng me by your own yard, sir?" said Father Dan, and at that straight thrust my husband broke into ungovernable rage.

"Everybody knows what a Popish priest is," he said. "A meddlesome busybody who pokes his nose into other men's secrets. But priest or no priest, I'll have no man coming to my house to make mischief between husband and wife."

"Are you sure," said Father Dan, "that some woman isn't in your house already, making mischief between wife and husband?"

That thrust too went home. My husband looked at me with flashing eyes and then said:

"As I thought! You've been sent to help my wife to make a great to-do of her imaginary grievances. You're to stay in the house too, and before long we'll have you setting up as master here and giving orders to my servants! But not if I know it! . . . Your reverence, if you have any respect for your penitent, you'll please be good enough to leave my wife to my protecton."

I saw that Father Dan had to gulp down his gathering anger, but he only said:

"Say no more, my lord. No true priest ever comes between a man and the wife whom God has given him. It's his business to unite people, not to put them apart. As for this dear child, I have loved her since she was an infant in arms, and never so much as at the present speaking, so I don't need to learn my duty from one who appears to care no more for her than for the rind of a lemon. I'll go, sir," said the old man, drawing himself up like a wounded lion, "but it's not to your protection I leave her—it's to that of God's blessed and holy love and will."

TROUBLED THOUGHTS.

My husband had gone before the last words were spoken, but I think they must have followed him as he went lunging down the stairs.

During this humiliating scene a hot flush of shame had come to my cheeks and I wanted to tell Father Dan not to let it grieve him, but I could do nothing but stoop and kiss his hand.

Meantime, two or three of the servants had gathered on the landing at the sound of my husband's voice, and among them was the flinty housekeeper holding the Father's little bag, and she gave it back to him as he passed her.

Then, all being over, the woman came into my room, with an expression of victorious mischief in her eyes and said:

"Your ladyship had better have listened to them as knows, you see."

I was too benumbed by that cruel stroke to reply, but Price said enough for both of us.

"If them as knows," she said, "don't get out of this room inside two seconds they'll get their ugly faces slapped."

I thought I had reached the end of my power of endurance, and that night, before going to bed, while my maid was taking down my hair, and I was thinking of Martin and asking myself if I should put up with my husband's brutalities any longer, I heard her say:

"If I were a lady married to the wrong man, I'd have the right one if I had to go through the divorce court for him."

Now that was so exactly the thought that was running riot in my own tormented mind, that I flew at her like a wild cat, asking her how she dared to say anything so abominably wicked, and telling her to take her notice there and then.

But hardly had she left the room, when my heart was in my mouth again, and I was trembling with fear lest she should take me at my word and then the last of my friends would be gone.

SUICIDE WILL NOT HALT PROBE BY WHITMAN

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—District Attorney Charles S. Whitman today reopened his probe into State graft and declared that the present investigation would be pressed successfully, despite the suicide of John J. Kennedy, State Treasurer, who ended his life by cutting his throat with a razor in a Buffalo hotel yesterday.

The District Attorney asserted that he had not in his possession any evidence of any illegal practices by the late treasurer, but that he believed he could have secured important evidence from Kennedy. According to reports at the District Attorney's office it was said the prosecutor would be seriously handicapped in his plans by the suicide.

He had planned to question Kennedy on the following:

1 Who ordered James Stewart's contract held up after he refused $150,000 to a man calling himself James F. Gaffney?

2—Who outside of the canal board sought to influence or did influence the letting of contracts involving millions?

3—Who contributed to campaign funds while holdnig contracts?

4—What arrangements were made with banks holding State deposits for furnishing bonds in a surety company in which Kennedy was formerly interested?

5—What arrangements were made with contractors for making bonds in the same concern?

In renewing his investigation, which had been delayed for several days owing to a court recess, District Attorney Whitman summoned twenty up-State contractors to appear this afternoon before Chief Magistrate McAdoo, who is conducting the John Doe probe into the "sandbagging" of contracors.

By order of Governor Glynn a rigid audit of the books of State Treasurer Kennedy was begun today. It is believed no irregularity will be found, as only last week the Comptroller's office examined the books and found the accounts balanced to a penny, but despite this the Governor determined on a thorough investigation. It became known today that James W. Osborne, who is conducting a legislative inquiry into State graft, had started a secret inquiry to learn if the late treasurer was intimatel; connected with a bonding company that had been doing a large business with State contractors.

That Kennedy was temporarily deranged when he slashed his throat was the general declaration of his friends today. They asserted that he had no reason for ending his life and that he in particular had nothing to fear from the fact that he had been summoned in the graft investigation. Kennedy will be buried Wednesday from the Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Buffalo.

The three girls are Bertha Temple, Beatrice Webster and Margaret Warren. The fortunate seven young men, who are to appear with the feminine trio, are George W. Kimball, George W. Goldsmith, William Bickley, Theodore Hansen, William Hitchcock, Charles Hamlin and William Bailey.

These ten are members of the Waltham Baraca Class. The comedy is to be presented in the vestry of the Congregational Church.

WALSH JOINS NEW AMERICAN THRIFT SOCIETY

Governor Walsh and Miss Alice Harriet Grady today received membership certificates in the American Society for Thrift, a unique corporation chartered by the State of Illinois which is not organized for profit and which solicits no funds. The objects set forth in both instances are:

"Promoting thrift among the people of the United States. (1) By education in the principles of savings and economy; (2) By inquiry into and inspiration of the example of other nations, among whom thrift has a greater development and recognition as a fundamental need for individual and public prosperity, good citizenship and tranquility; (3) By uniting for active inquiry into and discussion of thrift and its phases, the organizations and the institutions which represent the educational, commercial, industrial, religious, charitable, philanthropic, co-operative, publishing, fraternal, civic, municipal and juvenile forces of the United States."

All of which Governor Walsh and Miss Grady have subscribed to, as set forth under the official seal of the organization.

PIANO TUNER IS ACCUSED IN DIVORCE CASF

Sensational testimony was offered today for spectators who attended the opening session of the Furbush divorce trial in the contested session of the Middlesex Divorce Court before Judge Hardy at East Cambridge.

Wesley J. Furbush, grocer, truant officer and garage proprietor of Newton, is seeking divorce from Harriett H. Furbush on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. He also names statutory grounds.

George E. Palmer of West Newton, who has worked for Furbush for eighteen years, made statements on the witness stand reflecting upon Mrs. Furbush's conduct with a piano tuner.

Palmer also testified that, when Furbush was ill one time, Mrs. Furbush [illegible] said Palmer: "How is the old fool?"

"A very sick man," replied Palmer.

"It's too bad the old fool wouldn't die," is the answer Palmer said Mrs. Furbush made.

Christine Chisholm, domestic in the Furbush home, declared Furbush was not harsh toward his wife. She testified that, when Furbush went away on business trips, his wife would say, "I wish he'd never come back—I hate him."

The maid said that sometimes, when Furbush returned home at night from trips, his wife would lock him out.

Mrs. Furbush was not present at the opening of court. There are several witnesses for each side and the case promises to extend two or three days.

'DEFENDER' FOR POOR APPROVED BY PELLETIER

District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, in a speech before delegates of the Boston Central Labor Union, advocated the appointment of a "public defender" to represent poor defendants accused of crime in the lower courts.

"I can see no pressing need for such an official," said the District Attorney, "in the Superior Court for Suffolk County. When men are without counsel the District Attorney makes no opening to the jury and no argument at the close of the case, whereas such persons are allowed to argue and make their statements in a way which would never be tolerated from an attorney.

"I am inclined to think, however, that a defender or adviser of indigent defendants might well attend some of the lower courts, where men and women are sometimes rushed through a trial without really knowing what it is all about, or advised to plead guilty by some officious person who still feels that the main object of a court and police force is to convict because they cannot be wrong in the [illegible] made and warrant issued."

Holdup Men Dodge Bullets in Chase

George Vigas of No. 21 Kingston street, Somerville, was held up by two men and robbed of $12 early today, at Main and Baldwin streets, Charlestown. M'DERMOTT IS FOUND GUILTY OF EXTORTION

Edward McDermott, former foreman of the Hugh Nawn Construction Company, was today found guilty of extortion on nine counts when a sealed verdict was opened in the Suffolk Superior Court. When the jury reached the verdict on Friday night the court had adjourned.

It was charged in the indictment that McDermott had demanded five dollars from a number of men who sought employment on the Copley Square section of the Boylston street subway, and that he also demanded one dollar a week from them to keep their positions.

There were eleven counts. Two of them were dismissed.

Treat the cause with SCOTT'S EMULSION which contains pure cod liver oil to enrich the blood and energize the system, hypophosphites to nourish and upbuild the nerves, and glycerine to sooth and heal.

Thousands testify that Scott's Emulsion overcame catarrh in a permanent, natural way and it will surely help you.

INDIGESTION, GAS, DYSPEPSIA GONE

"Pape's Diapepsin" fixes sick, sour, gassy stomachs in five minutes.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated, and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

Can the Length of Life Be Doubled?

Professor Metchnikoff, an eminent European medical authority, says that if the colon (large intestine) should be removed, the average length of human life would be increased to 150 years.

Whether this is true or not, it is certainly a fact that man's health and efficiency depends almost entirely on keeping the large intestine in sound, clean, working condition. If as in constipation, refuse matter is allowed to remain in the colon, it rapidly ferments and forms virulent poisons that are at once taken up by the blood and distributed throughout the body. Medical men say that from this cause alone nine-tenths of all human ills originate, directly or indirectly.

Keep the large intestine clean, then, and you have practically insured yourself against disease.

Physicians have long known that the only safe, sure, permanent cure for constipation is the internal bath. But, until recently, it has been impossible to secure the full benefits of internal bathing at home.

Now, with a J. B. L. Cascade, anyone can take an internal bath in a few minutes in exactly the proper way.

The J. B. L. Cascade is the invention of Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell, one of New York's eminent physicians. By gently and thoroughly cleansing the intestines it induces them to again resume their natural, healthy operation. Already more than 200,000 cases of constipation have been permanently relieved by using the J. B. L. Cascade.

We have many like the following:

Mr. Hubert W. Lucas, of 43 Broadway, Norwich, Conn., writes under date of August 31, 1913:

"Having used the 'Cascade' for 15 years, on and off, I want to tell you of the marvelous work it has done for me. I don't need to use it now very often, but when a person gets a cold, or overeats, or has a headache, one treatment brings great relief right away. While living in New York ten years ago I was taken with dysentery, caused by change of water. I went to several physicians in New York City, but I grew worse. At that time my home was in Providence and I had left my 'Cascade' there, but I went back, took four or five treatments and was cured. And I have never been troubled with dysentery since. If I could not get another 'Cascade' I would not sell mine for $1,000. I have never known in all the years I have used it that my bowels failed to move regularly every day in the year. This I will testify to any one in the U. S. A."

Inasmuch as many thousands are using and praising the J. B. L. Cascade, and the most enlightened physicians are prescribing it, it would seem worth every one's while to see the Cascade at Riker-Jaynes drug stores, and let the principles and operation of the system be thoroughly explained—this, of course, involves no obligation whatever.

TURN OVER to the first line and you are off on your journey. The balmy breezes of the ocean put you in just the right frame of mind for what is to come. You are moving along seeing it all, feeling it all, laughing one minute, crying the next, and learning something all the time. Panama is the grandest land of romance in all the world. It is the land of PIRATES Panama was the stamping ground of the bold buccaneers of the Spanish Main. The story of these swish-buckling adventures makes your blood thrill as you follow Mr. Abbot.

INTRIGUE Panama has been the checkerboard for great diplomatic games here and abroad. The big nations have realized that the little strip of land might be the future pivot point in a great world war. The inside story of it all is told in this book.

GOLD The Spaniards crossed the Isthmus for the yellow treasure, fought the Indians, and practised untold atrocities. The '49ers made it their lane to the goldfields of California.

WAR Wars have raged for centuries. There was an average of a revolution a year on the Isthmus until the United States "took Panama." When man wasn't fighting nature he was fighting his fellow man. Mr. Abbot tells about it in a thrilling way.

POLITICS When the United States took Panama it played a bold game of politics that changed the map of the world. Was it justified in what it did? The book gives the facts without prejudice, and you can form your own opinion.

SANITATION For centuries fevers raised a barrier as impassable as the jungle itself. They made the Isthmus a lane of graves. Uncle Sam conquered the dread Yellow Jack, and made it possible to live and work. Read how it was done. It's a wonderful story.

TRIUMPH When America dug the canal she did what the world said was impossible. She has achieved the greatest engineering triumph in the history of the world. You will want to throw up your hat at the glory of it.

'UNDER COVER' WINNER SOUTH BOSTON GIRL

"I wish someone would take me to see 'Under Cover,'" was the simple sentence for which the mangement of the Plymouth Theatre paid $10, or at the rate of $1 a word, to Miss Mary McMahon, No. 235 Dorchester street, South Boston, in the contest among AMERICAN readers to secure advertising suggestions for the play entitled "Under Cover." Hundreds of replies were received and the judges had hard work picking the winners. But it was unanimously agreed that Miss McMahon's contribution deserved the first prize because of its simplicity and human quality, containing as it does the suggestion of the play about which everyone is talking.

Many descriptions received had to be eliminated because of similarity, and only those possessing a touch of originality were considered in the final decision.

The second prize of $5 was awarded to Mrs. Roger Noble Burnham, No. 500 Boylston street, for her clever verse:

"'Under Cover,' yes, you bet!
It's a play you won't forget.
Go to see it without fail;
It pleases even PHILIP HALE!"

The third prize, a box for the specified performance, went to Mrs. H. Dana, No. 164 Carpenter street, Providence, for her warning line:

"You're cheating your eyes of a treat if you fail to see 'Under Cover.'"

The next ten prizes, a pair of seats each, were awrded for the following descriptions and suggestions:

"When blizzards or the 'blues' abound, a pleasant refuge may be found in 'Under Cover.'"—John Fitzpatrick, No. 54 Webster avenue, Cambridge.

"The favorite show of critics who know."—John M. Haffner, No. 860 Columbus avenue.

"'Under Cover' is a play you think you thoroughly understand until you get the last act, then the sudden turn in affairs makes you want to stay and see it all over again to find out why you didn't guess the finish before."—Frances M. Capelle, No. 15 Stafford street, Roxbury.

"'Under Cover' is a splendid tonic. Go and be rejuvenated."—Miss Helen M. Harris, Filene's Store, Glove Department.

"To see 'Under Cover' is like renewing an old and loved acquaintance."—Miss D. A. McDermott, No. 284 West Broadway, Gardner, Mass.

"For genuine human feeling and unadulterated joy in the triumph of virtue over villiany, 'Under Cover' deserves the palm."—Mrs. Annie Hoegan, Ponpapoag.

"'Under Cover' is out of sight!"—Harlan C. Pearson, No. 37 South Spring street, Concord, N. H.

"Everything in 'Under Cover' is 'Within the Law.'"—Thomas J. Mella, No. 3 Pond street, Amesbury, Mass.

Sharlow Replaces Nielsen at Concert

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The audience at the Boston Opera House last night was treated to a sudden change of bill as a result of the indisposition of Alice Nielsen. Miss Myrna Sharlow was called into service and sang several of the songs announced for Miss Nielsen. Cara Sapin and Fornari were other artists.

At Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon the Philadelphia orchestra paid its annual visit, bringing Mischa Elman as soloist. There was a very large audience. The program included Brahm's First Symphony, which Mr. Stokowski interprets in a masterly manner, a curious overture by Korngold, the latest European boy wonder, Saint-Saens No. 3 Concerto for violin, and the Tannhauser Overture and Venus music from "Tannhauser."

School Girl Had Serious Bronchial Cough—Cured it With Father John's Medicine.

"Three years ago I was in bed for six weeks with bronchitis. Had a bad attack, coughed all winter and was in the care of a physician. Last winter, when I had another attack as bad, a lady recommended Father John's Medicine. I commenced taking it in a few weeks, and since then have never missed a day in school. I owe a great deal to it as the results were most favorable. My attack last winter was so bad I was propped up in bed every night for five weeks to get a little rest."

Some Logical Conclusions

There is a turning point in advertising where outgo ceases and income begins—where the investment begins to pay dividends. Every dollar's worth of business done beyond this point yields a greater net profit, because it is transacted with little or no additional expense so far as help and other fixed charges are concerned. By adding the energy of increased advertising, earnings may be increased far beyond the cost.

An advertiser may be spending a large sum, but that does not necessarily mean that he is doing all the business that he is capable of doing, or doing it on the most profitable basis.

He may be covering an immense field and believe he is exhausting his advertising possibilities. Perhaps a smaller expenditure, focused on a more responsive field, might lower his expenditures and enlarge his profits.

An advertiser may be spending tens of thousands or hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, and believe he is spending it judiciously, but investigation might disclose that a considerable portion of it is being thrown away. But this does not mean that advertising, done on an intelligent basis, is not productive of profitable results.

The fact that the world's cleverest business men annually invest in excess of Five Hundred Million Dollars in advertising, proves conclusively that an inability to succeed in it is due to improper application of its principles to the particular case—and nothing more.

Begin right—select a field of possible buyers, who have the means as well as the inclination to gratify the desires that advertising creates. Then, through intelligent, persistent and forceful advertising, develop your customers.

In Other Words, Advertise—and Advertise Adequately—in the American, Because

1—It has one of the largest and fastest-growing evening circulations in America. About 400,000, net paid, daily.

2—It has a circulation among intelligent, well-to-do people with a buying power of over a Million Dollars a day.

3—It has a circulation which is responsive to a sane advertising apeal, not only because of the "buying power" of its readers. but, more important, because these readers have confidence in the newspaper of their choice—confidence because they are conscious that a wide variety of the most desirable advertising is to be found in its columns.

4—Because it offers more result-producing circulation at a less rate per thousand than is possible to secure elsewhere, it affords advertisers a highly profitable investment.

5—Finally, because "the proof of the pudding is in the eating thereof"—the successful experience of others is the safe pointer for you.

¶ The Boston American offers a correspondingly important public service to reader and advertiser alike. Comparison is the final test of the measure of success.

¶ The Boston American invokes the test of comparison and invites a critical judgment of the amount of its circulation, and the business value of its circulation for the advertiser.

The American and Pathe Freres Collaborate in a Plan to Amuse, Entertain and Educate Boston.

Zola's powerful novel "Germinal" is about to be presented by Pathe in five reels, and this great novel is being printed in serial installments in the AMERICAN. It is not possible to do justice to this great photo-drama within the space limits of one instalment.

From day to day during the week, each new Pathe picture-drama will be told in the form of a novel before the pictures are placed on exhibition in the theatres. Every day the AMERICAN will present a short fiction story, romance, tragedy, comedy or adventure—educational and inspiring—and in the afternoon and evening it can be seen enacted into real life in the moving pictures.

On this page today is presented a chapter of Pathe's remarkable photo-play reproduction of Zola's famous novel, "Germinal." This is a famus romance: a wonderful masterpiece of vast power, absorbing interest, minute realism and subtle analysis. The plot deals with a strike at a coal mine in Voreux, France. The leader of the strike is Stephen Lantier, son of Gervaise and Lantier of "L'Assommoir," and brother of Zola's famous character, Nana.

Stephen Lantier is a strong figure throughout the novel, and Catherine, the heroine, is a powerful character, as strong as Gervaise or Nana, but without their repellant features. Souvarine, Daddy, Jollycorpse, Chaval, Johnny, Mother Maheu, Pluchart, Rasseneur and La Mouquette are also graphically sketched. The life of the miners is depicted with even more than Zola's usual force, and the flooding of the Voreux pit is a perfect triumph of stirring effect.

Another installment of "Germinal" will be printed later in the AMERICAN. Wait for this great Pathe production and see it in the moving pictures when it is on exhibition at the theatres.

One of the Scenes that will thrill you in the five-reel photo-play Pathe Freres have made of Zola's "Germinal."

"GERMINAL"

The Story of the Great Coal Strike.

By EMILE ZOLA,

The Famous French Novelist.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

When Stephen Lantier, his friend Maheu and the other coal miners of Voreux go to the mine offices to draw their fortnight wages they are astounded to find a notice posted announcing a reduction in the scale of pay. This is a crushing blow to the miners, for by toiling long hours and taking their wives and children into the mines to work with them they are able under the present scale to earn barely enough to keep body and soul together. Before they have decided what action to take a serious accident occurs in the mine. Little Johnny Maheu is injured so badly that he will be a cripple for life.

CHAPTER III.

The Strike Begins.

ON this particular Monday the Hennebeaus had the Gregoires and their daughter, Cecily, to breakfast. Quite a party had been arranged. After breakfast Paul Negrel was to take the ladies over St. Thomas, a new pit, or, rather, one newly reopened, with all the latest mechanical improvements. But all this was nothing more than a pretty pretext. This party was the invention of Mme. Hennebeau, to hasten the marriage of Paul and Cecily.

And just on that very Monday, at 4 in the morning, the strike had abruptly broken out. When, on the 1st of December, the company had applied its new tariff and system, the miners had remained calm. At the end of the fortnight, when paid, not one of them had made the slightest objection. The whole of the administrative staff, from the director to the lowest inspector, imagined that the tariff had been accepted. Their surprise on that morning was, therefore, proportionately great on receiving this declaration of war, showing tactics and a power of organization that seemed to indicate an energetic guidance.

At 5 o'clock Dansaert came personally to awaken M. Hennebeau and to tell him that not a single man had gone down the Voreux pit. The village of the "Two Hundred and Forty," when he passed through it, was fast asleep, its doors and windows securely locked. And the moment the director had jumped out of bed, his eyes heavy with sleep, he was overwhelmed on every side. Every quarter of an hour messengers ran up; telegrams kept pouring in like a hailstorm.

At first he had hoped that the revolt was confined to the Voreux pit, but the news became more serious at each minute. At the Crevecoeur and Maron pits the work was stopped; at the Madeleine none but the stablemen had gone down; at the Victoire and Feutry-Cantel, the two best disciplined pits, the men were reduced by a third; at St. Thomas only every one was at his post—its men seemed to have remained outside the movement. Until 9 o'clock he dictated telegrams to everybody and to everywhere—to the Prefect at Lille, to the members of the company's board, informing the authorities, asking for instructions. He had sent Negrel on a tour of inspection to the neighboring pits in order to have authentic particulars. All at once M. Hennebeau remembered the breakfast, and was about to send his coachman to the Gregoires to tell them that the party was put off, when a sudden hesitation, a want of resolve, made him waver; him, the man who had just in a few brief phrases prepared his campaign with almost military promptitude. He went up to the dressing room of Mme. Hennebeau, whose maid was just putting the finishing touches to her hair.

"Indeed, they have struck," she said, very tranquilly, when he had consulted her. "Well, what is that to us? We are not going to stop eating on their account, are we?"

And to all he could say about the breakfast being interrupted, perhaps, about the projected visit to the pit having become impossible, she had a ready answer. Why spoil a breakfast that was already on the fire? And as for the excursion to the pit, if the thing seemed impossible, they might abandon the idea afterward.

"Besides," she added, when her maid was gone, "you know well enough why I wish to have these good folk here. This marriage ought to concern you much more than all the nonsense of your workmen. And—and I wish it, so there's an end of it, and don't contradict me."

He looked at her, his lips quivering slightly, the features of the stern and resolute disciplinarian showing for a few seconds the secret grief of a broken heart. She had remained seated before the glass, her shoulders bare, in the fully mature, but still resplendent beauty of the woman of forty. For a moment he felt inclined to take her into his arms, but he restrained himself because for the last ten years husband and wife had lived apart.

"Very well, then," he said, leaving the room. "We'll countermand nothing."

Hennebeau was born in the Ardennes. His start in life had been difficult, like that of most poor, young orphans thrown on their own resources in Paris. After having, by dint of great privations, managed to attend the courses of the Mining Institute, he had, at the age of twenty-four, obtained the appointment of engineer to the St. Barbe pit, belonging to the Grand Combe Company. Three years afterward he became divisionary engineer to the Marles pit in the Pas-de-Calais. It was here that he got married, by one of those strokes of fortune which are almost the rule among mining engineers, to the daughter of a wealthy spinner of Arras. During fifteen years the married couple inhabited the same small provincial town without the slightest incident interrupting the monotony of their daily existence, for they had not even a child born to them. A growing spirit of irritation had estranged Mme. Hennebeau from her husband. Brought up in the worship of money, she despised this man, who painfully earned his modest salary, and from whom she derived none of the mundane and social satisfactions dreamed of during her school days. He, strictly honest, did not speculate, but stuck to his post like a soldier. The first disagreements had sprung from there and been aggravated by differences of temper, both physical and moral. He worshipped his wife; if she worshipped any one at all, it was some ideal lover, altogether unlike her wedded lord.

Hennebeau at last made up his mind to leave the Provinces and to accept an administrative post in the capital, thinking that his wife would be grateful to him for at least that much. But Paris still further widened the gulf between them—this Paris for which she had craved while still playing with her doll. In about a week she had purged herself of her provincial ways and manners and adopted those of the born Parisian fine lady, imitating the latter's elegance, rushing head foremost into all the extravagant follies of the period.

The contrary almost happened. During the three years that they had been at Montsou the weariness and irritation of their first marriage life had recommenced. At first Mme. Hennebeau had appeared relieved by the profound quietude around her, finding comfort in the unbroken monotony of this immense plain. She had done with life; she pretended to be heartbroken, so utterly indifferent to everything that even the prospect of getting stout did not affect her. Then, beneath this indifference, another attack of mundane fever declared itself, a revived craving to return to the world once more, which she endeavored to beguile for six months by organizing and furnishing to her taste the small mansion allotted to the director. She said it was odious to her in its present state, and began to fill it with tapestry and knick-knacks, with sumptuous accessories of all kinds, the fame of which spread as far as Lille. After which her country surroundings exasperated her; this everlasting procession of the beasts of the fields, those never-ending black roads, swarming with a horrid population that frightened and disgusted her.

Lamentations about being exiled began; she accused her husband of having sacrificed her to this salary of eight thousand dollars, a mere pittance, and scarcely sufficient to keep the house going. Why did not he take example by others and demand a part of the profits? Why did not he claim some shares? In short, why did not he try to be a successful man at last? She insisted upon all this with the cruelty of the woman, strong in the consciousness of the marriage portion she had brought.

He, ever correct, took refuge in the calm imperturbability of the great administrator, for the love for his wife grew stronger each day, fanned by her contemptuous indifference. He had never inspired her with such a passion as he himself dreamed of. Each morning he hoped that night would bring the desired reconciliation; each evening he quailed before her cold, stern looks, scarcely daring to touch her hand.

Just at that time Paul Negrel came to Montsou. His mother, the widow of a captain in the army, living at Avignon, her husband's birthplace, on the slenderest of incomes, had condemned herself to the greatest privations in order to send her son to the Polytechnic School in Paris. He had passed his examination by the skin of his teeth, and his uncle had offered to take him as engineer to the Voreux pit. From that moment, Hennebeau treated him like a child of his own, gave him his apartment, allowed him to live there altogether, which enabled Negrel to send half of his salary of six hundred dollars to his mother. In order to hide his kindness, Hennebeau spoke of the trouble it would have been to the young man to make a home of his own in one of the little cottages reserved to each engineer of the pits; besides, he pretended to want the little tenement for an engineer of the central service, who was already living there. Mme. Hennebeau at once assumed the role of aunt and tender aunt, ever ready with sweet counsel in every emergency.

Two years passed like this. The idea of a good match for her protege constantly preoccupied Mme. Hennebeau, and if Hennebeau's suspicions were suddenly aroused one night, they were as suddenly lulled to rest next morning by Mme. Hennebeau mentioning that she had chosen Cecily Gregoire to be their nephew's wife. And Mme. Hennebeau bestirred herself so energetically that her husband was ashamed of his monstrous thoughts. He simply felt very grateful to the young man, because the house was less dull since his arrival.

In fact, the crops this year are already a month ahead of those of last year at this time, and the railroads are hard pressed for cars in which to move the products of the soil of all kinds.

The [illegible] celery crop is very heavy, and it is estimated that it will take [illegible] to handle it. Millions of dollars are already pouring in for the citrus crop this Spring. There are from [illegible] cars of oranges and lemons.

OREGON IS HOPEFUL.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 16.—Oregon looks forward to the coming year with confidence. The outlook for good times in all lines is very bright. Money is more plentiful. Of eighty-four banks in the State, seventy-three have already applied for admission to the Federal reserve system.

The announcement of the reopening of [illegible] mills and sawmills with larger orders than usual at this time of year, giving employment to thousands of men, shows this industry is perhaps quickest to recover from the "business hesitation."

IRON MILLS BUSY.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 16.—Steel mills and iron foundries in the St. Louis district are now operating full time once more and the orders are piling up in a way to encourage the owners. Who, however, declare one thing is needed to bring the business above normal and that is to permit the railroads to increase rates.

Contracts have been closed for a new $[illegible] hotel here near the Union Station, and within the last few days other large contracts for buildings requiring steel construction have been let. Contractors report indications bright for a busy season in the building trades this Spring.

"DEPRESSION VANISHING."

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 16.—President E. M. Herr of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, contributed largely to the general feeling of optimism and hopefulness in the Pittsburgh district when he said today: "I can tell you that the business depression, which began last November, is fast vanishing and all the indications are for an improvement, not rapid, but steady and permanent."

WOOLEN MILLS REOPEN.

YANTIC, Ct., Feb. 16.—The Ardmore Woolen Company has started up the Yantic Woolen Mills, idle for six months. Several of the departments announce that they will run day and night. Large orders are coming in to the concern.

Would Exclude "Photo" Brides

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Commissioner-General Caminetti of the Bureau of Immigration, in his first annual report, discussing Japanese immigration, expresses doubt as to whether the "photograph" brides, after having gone through a marriage ceremony by proxy, recognized as legal in Japan, are really entitled to admission.

The Sensational Story of Love of a Woman of 40 for a Boy of 22

SYNOPSIS.

BETTY DUNBAR, a society widow, who lives with her maiden [illegible] Ethel Houghton, [illegible] is in love with a youth of twenty-two named Cecil. Betty is forty and has two boys. She is loved devotedly, but in secret, by Sir Egbert Ingleside, a [illegible] who is about her age. When the story opens Betty is telling Sir Egbert of her infatuation for the youth. She admits that she will never marry Cecil because of the difference in their ages. "Aunt Ethel" appears just as Betty, Sir Egbert and the two boys have planned a picnic, and says that a telegram has arrived at the house for Betty. She is wildly excited. In the telegram Cecil tells her he is leaving for America the next day and must see her. She leaves on the 2.20 train. Meanwhile Lord Murdon, a penniless dandy, calls to see Miss Ethel. He proposes to marry her as a matter of [illegible] for making her Lady Murdon in exchange for the money she will bring him. They are discussing this proposition [illegible] when Sir Egbert comes into the room carrying Jack, Betty's younger son, who has fallen from a tree. The boy is unconscious.

Bill ran to the phone. "I want Dr. Wade, No. [illegible], please."

"I say, this is very distressing," broke in Murdon. "What happened?"

"He was up the [illegible] tree in the wood, you know—the one we always climb—and there's a rotten branch—Hello! Yes, is Dr. Wade in? I say, can you come around at once? Jack's had an accident—this is Bill Dunbar—brother Jack—oh, do come! Yes, he's unconscious now—fell off a tree about a twenty foot drop. He's unconscious. Be quick! How long? Good. Good-by. He'll be here in five minutes. His car was at the door."

"Good luck!" called Eggy from the inner room, where he and Ethel were removing the brown [illegible] as gently as possible from the quiet little form.

"A twenty-foot drop! Funny insect!" exclaimed Lord Murdon.

A BROTHER'S WOE.

"About that," said the frightened big brother, "It wouldn't have made much difference if it was twenty-five or fifteen—you wouldn't have liked to have done it, anyway. I went sick when he thudded. It was awful, awful! Where's mummy? Hasn't anyone told mummy? Where's mummy? I must find mummy. Is she in her room?"

"Your mother's gone to London, Master William," said Mary from the doorway, where the servants were huddled, waiting news of their precious little "Master Jack."

"To London! Why, she was here just now at our picnic!"

"She went off on the [illegible] to see a friend," explained Murdon. "How did it happen?"

"He was on a rotten branch high up, and it broke off. He looks awful. Can't somebody fetch mummy here? Why doesn't that doctor come? He's being hours!"

But Dr. Wade was speeding over the road to Betty's precious baby boy even while Betty was speeding over the ties to London and that other boy she loved—so differently.

Soon the good old doctor arrived, and while he and Ethel were shut in with the still, little, white figure, Eggy came out to comfort the brother who was so helpless in his grief.

"How is he?" groaned Bill.

"Bad, old son," said Eggy.

"Oh, if only mummy was here!"

"I'm going to telegraph to her now."

"Quite what I would suggest," said Sir [illegible].

And as a message winged its way over the wires to wait for Betty on the hall table of Dolly Palgrave's house. But the house was empty and Dolly Palgrave, strolling over the [illegible] was even then deciding to run up and show "dear Betty" her smart new [illegible] things. So at just the moment when Dolly Palgrave's green and white clad figure was pushing open the door that stood ajar at the manor house, a smart little maid was taking in a wire at 122 Ashburn Mansions and wondering if the mistress was coming back with guests that day.

"Did you send the wire?" asked Ethel, coming from the still chamber where the still little figure lay. "Are you sure you got the Palgrave woman's address correctly?"

"As your door is open, may I come in?" called a fresh voice.

"Dolly Palgrave!" exclaimed Ethel.

"How do you do, Ethel. Lord Murdon—Sir Egbert. Quite a gathering at the [illegible]. Is Betty in?"

"Mrs. Palgrave!" cried Sir Egbert, with a world of wonder in his quiet voice.

"NO SUCH THING."

"But Betty has gone to London to see you," said Ethel.

"To see me?" laughed Dolly Palgrave in wondering repudiation.

"You telegraphed for her," said Sir Egbert.

"I telegraphed for her?"

"This morning."

"But I'm not in London. I'm here. I'm spending the week end at Lady Harry's."

"She got a telegram from you this morning," insisted Ethel.

"She did no such thing." All the sickly sweet went from Dolly Palgrave's manner and she became bluntly positive.

In a moment Ethel collected herself. This was an emergency—and the business woman would meet it. Later that same business woman would insist on a reckoning.

"I must have misunderstood her. I'm afraid I wasn't paying attention. Anyhow, it's not of any consequence," said Ethel. "Luncheon's ready, and that you find us all at sixes and sevens, Mrs. Palgrave, since Jack has just met with an accident—we will still eat. Lord Murdon, will you take Mrs. Palgrave in to lunch?"

"I'm so sorry," said Dolly Palgrave.

"Yes, yes—we'll be sorry in the dining room if you don't mind—quiet is essential here."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Coal Deliveries Made on Sunday

Boston suburbs were treated to the unusual spectacle of coal deliveries on Sunday, necessitated by the severe storm of the day before. Special permits were necessary, and the merry rattle of the black nuggets disturbed the occasional Sunday forenoon sleep of many a family.

LISTEN MOTHER DO BE CAREFUL

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

NEW INDUSTRIES FOR BOSTON IS THE SLOGAN OF TODAY

To His Honor Mayor Curley and All Other Industry Boomers:

Do not forget the old industries, one in particular, the Cigar Industry, which has been steadily growing here for over thirty years, and deserves the patronage and support of every public spirited citizen.

The 1913 payroll in Boston cigar factories amounted to over $3,000,000.

The Cigar Makers' Union expended over $15,000 in advertising their Blue Label and booming the industry.

A number of our merchants make huge window displays of out of town made cigars, thus building up the industry in other cities, to the detriment of the industry here. Still, the cry is for new industries. Is that consistency—is it good business judgment?

Are not cigarmakers employed in Boston more profitable to our merchants, real estate owners, professional men, etc., than those employed in other States?

SMOKERS—You are the ones who can show your interest in booming home industry by purchasing only Boston Made Cigars. Demand them of your dealers, be they grocers, fruit dealers, tobacco merchants or druggists. Demand Boston Made Cigars.

The Foundation of Good Health Is Good Blood!

Are you pale? Are you weak? Are you no longer ambitious or energetic? Have you pimples or boils? Do you suffer from headaches, low spirits?

Then you are anaemic—your blood is thin, lacking in healthy, strength-giving red corpuscles. Then your blood is impure—and your liver is not up to its task of clearing the blood from the poisons accumulated.

There is one remedy that will restore to you rich, health-giving blood—a remedy proved by experience—

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

(In Tablet or Liquid Form)

Is Just Such a Remedy as You Need

For forty years Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been used in every quarter of the globe. It has met successfully the test of actual trial. It is composed of roots from our great American forests, known to science as those which will best give the stomach, liver and bowels needed help. Don't wait until you are laid low by some serious costly sickness!

Now Enjoys the Best of Health.

"I was troubled with eczema from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet," writes Mrs. Ella Quick, of Deford, Michigan. "Could not walk at times nor wear shoes. Thought there was no help for me—at least the doctor said there was none. I went to see friends at Christmas-time and there heard of the good that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery had done for them and was advised to try it at once. For fear that I might neglect it my friends sent to the village and got a bottle and made me promise that I would take it. I had been getting worse all the time. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and used the 'All-Healing Salve,' which made a complete cure. It was slow but sure. I am well and enjoy health the best I ever did in my life."

MRS. QUICK

Take this "Discovery" now and learn what it will mean to you to have a stomach so well equal to its work that your food will nourish you and make good rich blood—to have a liver which will keep your blood clean and pure—to have bowels so well regulated that they will free your system of poisonous waste matters.

You will be thankful you have at your command so effective and reliable an aid to health, strength, good looks and good feelings.

You can obtain Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in tablet or liquid form from dealers in medicines—or send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial box of the tablets to Dr. PIERCE, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, New York.

COBB SAYS BALL PLAYERS ARE ALL FORCED TO ADMIRE UMPIRE WHO HAS NERVE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

BOSTON CURLERS GO AFTER THE MEDAL IN BIG MATCHES
ON THE CANADIAN RINKS

There is one thing that ball players are forced to admire in umpires, and that is nerve. No man lasts long in the big leagues as an umpire without this quality. Big leaguers make it their business to test out the nerve of umpires as soon as they break in, so that there will never be any question in the minds of the players as to whether they are "yellow" or not. If either a ball player or an umpire comes into the big league and displays any lack of nerve, he might just as well pack his grip and pull out again. There is no room for him.

There is an interesting story of how "Billy" Evans happened to go to work as an umpire. He was a newspaper reporter in Youngstown, Ohio, after he left Cornell University. He had been quite a student up there, as I get it, having played football until he hurt his knee, and having sung in the glee club, I think. When he got back to Youngstown, he had all the "rah rah" trimmings, was a good dresser and popular with the Youngstown society buds. But the newspaper business was not very remunerative in the small town.

Evans was doing baseball, covering the bush league games in the local lot, when the club was short an umpire one day. Evans had shown considerable baseball intelligence in that neighborhood, so they asked if he would crash out of the press stand into the gap and umpire the game. They offered him $5 for the afternoon's work, which looked like a lot of money, considering that his weekly pay envelope at the newspaper office only carried $12. "Billy" figured he was making about half of his salary in one afternoon in this way, and it looked pretty soft until he had gone through one game. They tell me that was a tough town to umpire in.

However, he supplied so much general satisfaction to both parties by his umpiring on the first day that they asked him to work all the games played in town and gave him a flat price of $5 per battle. "Billy" says his hardest work was on Sundays, when the real sporting element of the town, confined to the shops and other industries through the week, turned out to root and incidentally considered mobbing the umpire as one of their privileges.

Of course, as soon as it became locally known among the society buds that Evans was umpiring on Sundays, his social rating slumped, but his financial standing took a big jump, and "Bill" has ever preferred the financial position to the social one. He kept on with the newspaper, writing the story of the game each day after he had finished his work as an umpire.

Evans as a Busher Made Hit with McAleer.

"Jimmy" McAleer, the great outfielder who played with Cleveland and who has since managed the St. Louis and Washington Clubs and was the president of the Boston Red Sox, lived in Youngstown, and he stopped there one Sunday when his club had an off day, to see his folks. He took advantage of the opportunity to go down and watch the bushers play, thinking perhaps he might see one to his liking who would help his club.

Anyway, you cannot keep a baseball man from a ball game, no matter how strongly they insist that they wish the National Commission would pass a by-law barring them from all ball parks. McAleer made no progress in his search for budding talent, but he was impressed by the way in which Evans handled the contest, the young colleger getting away with a lot of tough situations.

At this time Ban Johnson was shy on umpires for the American League, and he mentioned the fact to "Jimmy" McAleer one day.

"There's a young fellow down in Youngstown getting away with the Sunday games in good shape," said McAleer. "Name is Evans. That's a tough town to work in, because they take their pleasure mobbing umpires."

"I'll have a look at him," said Mr. Johnson.

The president of the American League sent for Evans and offered him a trial, but "Billy" did not accept at once.

"I want to put it up to my mother," he said.

His mother finally consented after Evans proved to her that the prospects of an umpire in the big league were much brighter financially than those of a newspaper reporter in Youngstown, Ohio. His employer on the newspaper told him that he could have his old job back if he failed to give satisfaction in the big league, so Evans went to Chicago and worked his first game there. He still wore his good clothes and had the college boy air, which riled some of the old timers on the White Sox, such as "Jiggs" Donohue, who afterwards went crazy, and two or three others. Of course, all the ball players were "riding" Evans in the first game to try out his nerve, and he had some tough ones to call. One was against Donohue.

"I'll get you for that one," proclaimed "Jiggs" in loud tones so all the other ball players could hear him. "I'll beat your head off."

"You're welcome to," replied Evans. "I'll be in my room in the Great Northern Hotel at 8 o'clock tonight if you can come around and do the job. For the present, do your beating to the clubhouse."

Courage in Face of Trouble Saved the Day.

Donohue never showed to keep the date with Evans. Even after this, however, Evans had a lot of rough travelling to do, the big league dazzling him a good deal and each new batch of ball players being after him. That was the day of the old school ball player, and they could not understand Evans' style and his neat manner. They were more used to the "Tim" Hurst sort.

"Billy" got the name of being the worst umpire in the league until he went to work in a game in St. Louis one Sunday. Now, St. Louis is no peace-loving burg when it sees an umpire, for in that town an umpire must assimilate the blame and a lot of cushions, bottles, etc., for all evils. Evans had so tough a battle to go through that the management decided that it was best for purposes of personal safety to call the police before they permitted him to depart from the field. He was leaving, protected in this way, when some fan shied a bottle at long range and it hit Evans right behind the ear.

For a time, it was thought that the umpire was dead. They carted him off to the hospital, although most of those present had an idea that his destination should have been the morgue. He did not come to until late in the night, when the nurse read some extras to him about how an umpire had been killed at the ball park that day.

"Who was he?" said Evans.

"You're the umpire," replied the nurse.

"So I'm the dead one, am I?" asked Evans. "Well, I guess I'll show them yet whether they got me or not."

The physicians themselves were not so sure of the future, but Evans eventually got better and went back to umpiring with just as much nerve as ever he had. By this time, he had won the respect of all the players, and he has been one of the best umpires in the business ever since. He is unbiased in his decisions.

New Rowing Stroke for the Yale Crew

Definite plans of the Yale rowing coaches have been announced by Richard Armstrong, '95, graduate adviser in charge of the Blue navy, after conferring with Guy Nickalls, the English oarsman, and Eugene Giannini, assistant coaches.

"Nickalls and Giannini will do all the active coaching," said Armstrong. "The stroke which we have decided upon is a decided modification of the long body swing as used by Harcourt Gold last season."

In addition to the Harvard race at New London and the triangular race with Cornell and Princeton on May 23, Armstrong said Yale will enter a crew, probably the freshman boat, at the "American Henley" on May 16.

WRAY SIGNS UP AT HARVARD AS ROWING COACH

James S. Wray will be head coach of the Harvard rowing squad again this year in spite of the tempting offers from other colleges and wealthy boat clubs.

The Crimson's rowing committee has had Wray sign a formal contract, which is really only a promise that he will sign a real contract at the time when the present one expires.

So much anxiety has been felt among the members of the Harvard rowing committee that Wray might be tempted to sign with some other college at the expiration of his present contract at Harvard that the committee has taken time by the forelock and made this agreement with Wray.

Robert F. Herrick, chairman of the Harvard rowing committee, stated today that Wray had not signed the actual contract which will retain him at Harvard for the next few years.

The Harvard rowing chairman also said that a substantial increase in salary had been voted, but would not state what the amount was. It is understood that the new salary will be about $4,000 a year.

Mack Refuses Plank Increase in Salary

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16.—Eddie Plank, the hero of the last world's series, has returned his contract unsigned to Connie Mack, manager of the champion Athletics.

The veteran pitcher was offered the same salary he received last year, but he wants an increase. Mack says he will not grant the request.

Pell Beats Osborne in Racquet Tourney

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Feb. 16.—Clarence C. Pell of the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club defeated C. G. Osborne of the University Club, Chicago, three games to one, in the final round of the gold racquet championship.

The scores were: 15—5, 15—11, 15—17, 15—10. 60 aces to 43.

Tufts Starts Practice.

Battery candidates at Tufts College report today to Coach Slattery for cage practice. The remainder of the candidates will not be called out for two weeks. The battery positions are a problem to the coach, but in every position there is a wealth of experienced material. The best pitcher in sight is Krepps, whose work last year caused Connie Mack to offer him a contract.

School Notes

Now that Wellesley High has won the basketball championship, challenges from all parts of New England are pouring in and it is probable that Wellesley will defend its claim. The Wellesley High management announced that it is undecided regarding playing of post-season matches, but that matter will be decided today and then it will be decided whether the team will close its season with results already secured or will try for further athletic honors.

Many important school hockey games are on the schedule this week. Four school sevens, Melrose High, Boston English High, Hudson [illegible] and St. Mark's School still remain undefeated this season and these teams will be called upon to uphold their records this week.

On Friday Somerville High will play Melrose in an Interscholastic League game at the Arena and a win for Melrose will given that team a good lead for the championship.

Five games are on the schedule for tomorrow and these should furnish some good hockey. Rindge Technical plays Brookline High at Brookline; Lexington meets Belmont High at Lexington; Milton Academy and Melrose High clash in a hard game at Milton; Newton and Arlington are scheduled to play at Brae-Burn, and Wayland High plays Marlboro at Wayland.

Efforts will be made to play the deciding match in the Triangular League series between Newton High and Brookline High this week if a satisfactory date can be agreed upon. The [illegible] unfavorable weather conditions. It is understood both schools are willing to play it off at the Arena. It would not be surprising if the game was played Wednesday afternoon.

The track team at Medford High has been disbanded. Some of the members will, however, remain in training for a relay team to run against Malden High at the B. A. A. schoolboy games on February 28. The chief reason for the action is due to the fact that Captain [illegible] Mitchell could not secure the services of all the athletes at the school available. This is because the juniors and seniors hold class in the morning while the freshmen and sophomores attend school in the afternoon.

The track teams of Noble & Greenough, Roxbury Latin and Volkmann school will battle for the championship of the Private School Triangular League this afternoon on the board track at Dexter Field, Brookline. Coach [illegible] Volkmann team is the favorite. Roxbury Latin will compete without the services of Arthur Collins, Leo Connolly, Captain [illegible], Mills and McDonald, who were declared ineligible because of scholarship requirements. Following are the entries:

Forty-yard dash—Noble & Greenough, Woods, Means, Whitney, Freeman, Clark, Ferrers; Volkmann, Blanchard, Lawrence, Browne, Rowen, Wiswall and Arnold; Roxbury Latin, Welch, Robinson, William Collins.

Shotput—Volkmann, William Lawrence, Ben Blanchard, Van S. Bates; Roxbury Latin, Reese, Walter Connolly, Knott; Noble & Greenough, Coffin, Lander, Batchelder, Wiggin.

Schedule Ready for Navy Lacrosse Team

March 28, Lehigh; April 2, Baltimore City College; April 9, Johns Hopkins; April 16, Swarthmore; April 22, Harvard; April 30, Carlisle Indian School; May 7, University of Pennsylvania.

George Finlayson, of Montreal, has been re-engaged as coach, and will reach Annapolis during the first week of March. Preliminary practice opened today. The squad is promising.

NEW PROGRAM FOR ATHLETES IN TITLE MEET

Entries for the annual indoor championship games of the New England A. A. A. U. will close Saturday at the B. A. A. Clubhouse, and athletes are already signing up.

The competition will be of the highest possible standard, being open to not only regular club members, but also to college and unattached men.

The association has this year made an innovation in its program of events, viz.: that of holding junior events in the forty-yard dash, 440-yard and one-mile run, and the standing high jump.

All men are eligible for these events except Olympic champions, those who have previously won first place at a National, Canadian or New England (or other A. A. U. District) championship, winners at Intercollegiate Association championship events, such as I. C. A. A. A. A., New England I. C. A. A., Maine I. C. A. A., and similarly individual winners in a National or Intercollegiate cross-country championship meeting.

The track and field championship committee will hold a meeting immediately after the game and it is probable that all winners of events will be sent to the National Indoor Championships at New York, to be held Monday, March 2.

Zbyszko Here Today for Bout with Aberg

Stanislaus Zbyszko, the mighty Pole, arrives in Boston today for his match with Aberg on Thursday, February 26, in Mechanics Building.

The match will positively be to a finish, best two falls out of three. Both men want Tuohey to referee, but this is out of the question, because of the latter's injured leg.

Coulon to Box Williams.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—John Coulon, bantamweight champion, has signed an agreement to meet Kid Williams, of Baltimore, in a twenty-round bout before the Vernon (Cal.) Club. The date is to be selected later.

A KNOCK-OUT BLOW TO RHEUMATISM AND GRIPPE

Here's a new way to fight Rheumatism. A simple means of quick relief from its aches and pains and twinges. A famous chemist has dealt a knock-out blow not only to Rheumatism, but to Neuralgia, Lumbago, Grippe, Back-ache, Sore Muscles, Colds and many similar ailments. Rheumabath is a marvelous crystalline substance that contains in concentrated form the medicinal ingredients of famous Mineral Springs, where hundreds of thousands of people yearly journey for relief from bodily ills. Those who have tried this remarkable discovery declare that Rheumabath relieves aches and pains like magic. There seems to be no question but that Rheumabath is one of the greatest eliminators ever known. It increases the activity of the sweat glands. It calls the blood to the surface of the body, where it unloads poisons and toxins through the two million tiny "sewers" of the skin. No wonder the aches and pains, soreness and stiffness so quickly disappear. Many noted ball players and actors use Rheumabath to keep in the pink of condition.

Rheumabath enables you to get benefits equal to the famous Medical springs right in your own home. Dissolve Rheumabath in the hot bath water, and enjoy a delightfully stimulating and refreshing bath. You can go to bed and sleep like a top after your Rheumabath bath. It's a great thing for nervousness. It makes the skin soft as velvet, clears the complexion and improves the figure. If you have excess fat, a course of Rheumabath treatments will reduce your weight.

We can't begin to tell you here all the wonderful things Rheumabath does. You must try a package and see for yourself.

If your druggist cannot supply you, send 25c to the Rheumabath Company, Dept. 47, Minneapolis, Minn., for a full size package, or send $7.50 for a month's supply. Satisfaction guaranteed. All carriage charges prepaid. Book free. Sold by all Riker-Jaynes and other leading drug stores.

BOSTON TENNIS PLAYER WINS RACQUET TITLE

C. Hutchins of the Boston Tennis and Racquet Club is national champion, having captured the single squash racquet title match from H. A. Haines of Baltimore by three games to one. Hutchins won the championship at Baltimore in 1912.

Haines won the toss for choice of service and scored the first ace, but Hutchins equalized matters on obtaining the service.

The third aces fell to Haines and then Hutchins ran four straight.

After this Haines got going with a vengeance and made the longest run of the tournament.

Scoring ace after ace, he had accumulated 10 before Hutchins could get a look-in.

Then the Bostonian replied with a run of five and the score was called 12-10 in favor of Haines.

The latter continued to play a fine game and reeling off three aces, won the game, 15 to 10.

Haines obtained the lead in the second also, but Hutchins won out the game, 15—12.

As in the preceding game, Haines took the lead in the third game, but did not hold it long, Hutchins winning the game, 15—7.

The fourth game was better contested and at one time Haines looked like making it two all, and until Hutchins ran out the game and won the match it was nip and tuck.

The summary:

HUB CURLERS OFF TODAY FOR CANADA GAMES

The Boston curlers, who will compete for the Gordon medal next Friday at Montreal, leave Boston tonight. There will be about twenty rinks of curlers representing the United States, six of which will represent the Country Club, Brae-Burn and the Curling Club of Boston.

The detailed program was laid out by John McGaw, president of the Curling Club of Boston.

The plan is to arrive in St. John tomorrow, and after lunch the Curling Club of Boston will curl the St. Andrews' Club in the afternoon.

A match will be played with the Yarmouth Club on St. Andrews' ice on Wednesday, after which the Boston players will leave for Montreal.

On Friday the Gordon medal competition will be held, the ice being decided by draw.

On Saturday morning the Thistles have invited the Country Club curlers to a match at their new rink.

Although the Montreal Curling Club invited the Boston aggregation to stay over Saturday and go to a hockey match that nigh, a majority elected to come home Saturday night.

In the St. John-Boston matches, to be played tomorrow, the following Boston men will take part: Jaques, skip, Russell, Denny, Allen; Amory, skip, Daniels, Clement, Howe; Young, skip, De Camp, Albree, MacAusland; John McGaw, skip, Paul, Turner, Pfaelzer.

The Gordon medal teams from Greater Boston will be made up as follows:

COUNTRY CLUB.

Team 1—Russell, Denny, Allen, Jaques, skip.
Team 2—Daniels, Clement, Howe, Amory, skip.
Team 3—Windeler, Wylde, Pfaelzer, Stockton, skip.

CURLING CLUB OF BOSTON.

Team 1—Perry, J. C. McGaw, Paul, John McGay, skip.
Team 2—MacAusland, Albree, De Camp, Young, skip.

BRAE-BURN C. C.

Kidder, Chase, Withergee, Litchfield, skip.

MURPHY MUST GET OUT, SAY LEAGUE HEADS

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Charles W. Murphy must go. Organized baseball stand united on this question. Ban Johnson's threat to drive the owner of the Cubs without the fold is no idle boast.

He will be backed by every one of Murphy's own colleagues—the seven other club presidents of the National League.

"Murphy is a menace to the peace of our organization," said a National League Club owner today. "He is far too erratic both in his actions and in his talk.

"His latest outburst against Ban Johnson and Governor Tener proves him undesirable. I do not blame the American League executive for demanding vindication on our part.

"Murphy's case is up to Governor Tener. His power in the National League is absolute, as is that of Johnson in the American.

"President Tener signed a four-year contract with us last week At the time every club owner of the National League—save Murphy, who had left town—signed a contract giving our president supreme power in National League affairs. We voted to give Mr. Tener full authority to deal with Murphy."

It was learned on excellent authority that the National League intends to impeach Murphy at once if he refuses to step down and out. He has left himself open to expulsion by criticizing Ban Johnson and his own league.

MURPHY STANDS ALONE.

In view of the fact that Ban Johnson, backed by the American League, declared war on Murphy last week, Murphy now stands absolutely without support in the ranks of organized baseball. His own colleagues, including Hempstead and Ebbets have turned against him, and it is believed that serious trouble is in store for him.

When Johnson and the American League decided to make war on Murphy last Tuesday, even at the risk of breaking off friendly relations with the National League, Murphy's fate was sealed, according to baseball politicians. The National League promptly came to time with the first blow at Murphyism by taking Johnny Evers away from him. Evers was handed over to the Boston Braves and Murphy's agreement with Gaffney to take Players Sweeney and Perdue in exchange was cancelled by the league's directors.

By this action Murphy sustained a loss of about $25,000, it is figured, as Evers's release in cash would have netted at least $15,000, while Sweeney and Perdue if placed in the market could be disposed of for about $5,000 each.

MUST PAY EVERS.

Murphy will be notified in a few days that he must pay a big cash bonus to Evers, it is said, in the shape of damages. If he refuses to abide by the decision of the directors, as he threatens to do, he will be placed on trial before the league by Governor Tener, it is reported, and drastic action will result. The National League's resolution, adopted in November, 1912, to the effect that a representative of a club who fails to live up to the principles of sportsmanship or conducts his affairs to the detriment of the other club owners will be excluded from the league's councils will be the basis for Murphy's trial, so the story goes.

A certified copy of the now famous letter written by Horace Fogel in 1912 to G. W. Forman, a Chicago newspaper man, which is said to involve Murphy in the the mess which resulted in Fogel's expulsion, will be placed in evidence. This document, together with the way Murphy treated Frank Chance, Mordecai Brown and Evers, will be grounds for a final verdict. So bitter is the feeling against the owner of the Cubs that a prominent National League club president said today

"If Murphy does not withdraw from the control of the Cubs he will be left high and dry, and the National League will dissolve to reorganize a new circuit and to play the season out with only seven clubs. We will refuse to let our teams play the Cubs either in Chicago or in the other clubs. Murphy must go. The jig is up and he will be so informed officially this week. His case completely overshadows the Federal League situation. He has been tolerated just long enough and unless he is eliminated the National League will lose favor with the baseball public."

Governor Tener returned here from Washington last night, but he refused to discuss Murphy's case in any way. He will remain here today for several important baseball conferences.

Michigan Agricultural College, with a score of 983, took the lead in the sixth match among colleges and universities for the National rifle shooting championship.

Massachusetts Agricultural College, Minnesota University and Iowa State University were tied for second place.

In the second division the lead was won by the Washington State College, with a record class score of 966, and Cornell University and United States Naval Academy were tied for second place.

In the third division the University of Illinois still retains the lead.

The Pilgrim A. A. will endeavor to get back into the good graces of the local fans tonight when they meet the Syracuse Hockey Club at the Boston Arena, by winning a decisive victory from Jack Norfolk's seven. Syracuse is represented by a very strong team, which has made a fine reputation this season.

Jim Cree, a full-blooded Indian, is the "Big Noise" of the Syracuse seven, and although his prowess as a hockey player is well known to the followers of the game in this city, this will be his first appearance here.

The brilliant playing of this Indian has featured every game in which the Syracuse seven has taken part this year, and he is one of the greatest drawing cards in the country, as all who have witnessed him in action know that in every game he will spring some new sensation.

Together with his doing the bulk of the offensive work, he is also the strength of the defensive, although he is most ably assisted by Captain Pete Malloy.

A victory over Syracuse will re-establish the Pilgrims, and it is with this object in view that the local seven will strive to down the New Yorkers. The Syracuse seven will play B. A. A. tomorrow night at the Arena.

Honolulu Swimmer Harvard Team Head

Edward H. Gibb of Honolulu has been elected captain of the Harvard freshman swimming team for this season. Gibb prepared at Oahu College and Phillips Exeter Academy.

He is one of the fastest swimmers on the freshman squad and his specialties are the short dashes.

Several meets have been scheduled and the team will be kept busy until late in March. This is the first year that there has been a Harvard freshman swimming team.

Worcester Academy Star Ill with Grip

Russell Murphy of Worcester Academy, the former Lynn Classical High athlete, is suffering with a touch of the grip, and will not resume his studies at the academy for another week or two. Murphy was on the soccer team which defeated Andover Academy, and was elected captain of the soccer team for 1914. He also is a ball player of note, besides being always an honor student in studies.

Bescher Signs Up.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Bob Bescher, the outfielder acquired from Cincinnati by the New York National League Club in this Winter's trade that sent Charley Herzog to the Ohio city to manage the Reds, sent in his signed contract for three years to the local club.

GEORGE E. PHAIR SAYS:

A TRIPLE PLAY.

"Whaddaya mean you lost your job?"
Said Tinker to Evers to Chance.

LINES TO C. WEBB MURPHY.

Sit down! You are rocking the boat.
The boat isn't any too strong.
It's waterlogged now from the stern to the prow,
And threatens to sink before long.

The billows are washing the rail,
It's strange how you manage to float.
Sit down to your oar or you'll never reach shore.
Sit down!. You are rocking the boat.

Mr. Murphy is not financially connected with the Federal League, but he is the Federal League's best friend.

We fear that Mr. Murphy's definition of a sportsman does not tally with that of the late Noah Webster.

Frank Chance has nothing to say on the Evers imbroglio, but we can guess what he thinks.

Los Angeles fines Joe Rivers $25 for speeding, but Milwaukee puts him in the ring with Ad Wolgast, whereupon he slows up.

After a sojourn in Egypt, the athletes will be glad to return home, where they can get some real Egyptian cigarettes to smoke.

THE RESCUER.

It was a dark and stormy night,
The baseball scribe was in despair,
For there was not a tale in sight
To help him earn his daily fare.

And then appeared a beacon light
That filled his heart with joy and hope,
For Charlie Murphy hove in sight
With seven wagon loads of dope.

Having been an umpire and managed a team in Cincinnati, Hank O'Day is so hardened that he will be able to stand for Murphy almost a year.

King Cole probably needs the waters he is taking at Hot Springs, but we fear he is more in need of some fatherly advice.

RED SOX CABLE CALLAHAN TO SIGN SPEAKER

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Fearing that the Federal League may capture Tris Speaker, the crack centre fielder, the Red Sox management today sent a long cablegram to Paris requesting James J. Callahan, manager of the Chicago White Sox, to see Speaker at once and induce him to sign a contract with the Boston club at once.

Speaker is with the ball players that are making a tour of the world. He is due at Paris today. The officials of the Boston club hope to have a favorable reply from Callahan within twenty-four hours.

President J. J. Lannin of the Boston club was at his office in the Tremont Building today for the first time in a week. He attended the schedule meeting of the American League in New York last week and while there discussed fully the activities of the Federal League with his fellow-magnates.

As soon as Mr. Lannin arrived at his office today he telephoned for John I. Taylor, vice-president of the club. The Speaker matter was taken up at once. Speaker is the only player on the Red Sox list who hasn't signed a contract for next season or agreed with the club on the salary question.

It was decided, in view of the fact that the Federal League is said to have an emissary in Paris ready to make overtures to Speaker, that the best thing to do under the circumstances was to send a cablegram to Callahan asking him to see Speaker at once and use his best endeavors to get the centrefielder to sign a Boston contract.

"If we thought it necessary we would send a special representative to the other side to see Speaker," said Taylor, after his conference with Mr. Lannin, "but it would be a week before he could reach Speaker, so we decided to ask Callahan to act for us."

WHO HAS GOOD DIAMOND

Dan Clohecy, erstwhile owner of a New England franchise, is unable to secure grounds to play on, and the old association seems to have the upper hand.

The league has absolutely refused to transfer games this year without unanimous consent, and Clohecy is compelled to make overtures to the old association to build a new park.

Hub Boy Wins Mile Run in Australia

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 16.—The American athletes won six of the eight championships at the New South Wales meeting. George L. Parker, the new California sprinter, captured the 100 and 440-yard dashes; [illegible] Templeton, Olympic Club, San Francisco, the pole vault; Reginald Caughey of California, the shot-putting contest, and Jimmy Powers, B. A. A., the mile run. Templeton also won the 120-yard hurdle race.

The New England championship pool tournament at the White Bros.' room comes to a close this week, with five games to be played. Already Ryder of New Bedford, and Lawson of Lynn, have been eliminated, and this leaves but four players to settle the question of supremacy.

The showing of Upton of Salem has been a cause for regret among the followers of the fifteen-ball game, although he will have a chance to regain some of the lost ground in his last two games.

Quincy Five Leads in A. A. A. U. League

The race for first position in the W. E. A. A. A. U. Basketball League seems to be between the Quincy A. A. and the St. Alphonsus A. A. of Roxbury. The Quincy lads won two of the three games last week and are holding on to first place. The standing:

"Hub" Perdue Starts for Hot Springs

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 16.—"If I am to play on the Cub team it will be only after I have been ordered there by President James Gaffney of the Boston club, my boss. I am a Brave and I am going to stick," said Hub Perdue here just before boarding a train for Hot Springs to start spring training. Perdue received a wire from President Murphy of the Cubs demanding that he report to his club today, but the pitcher ignored the summons.

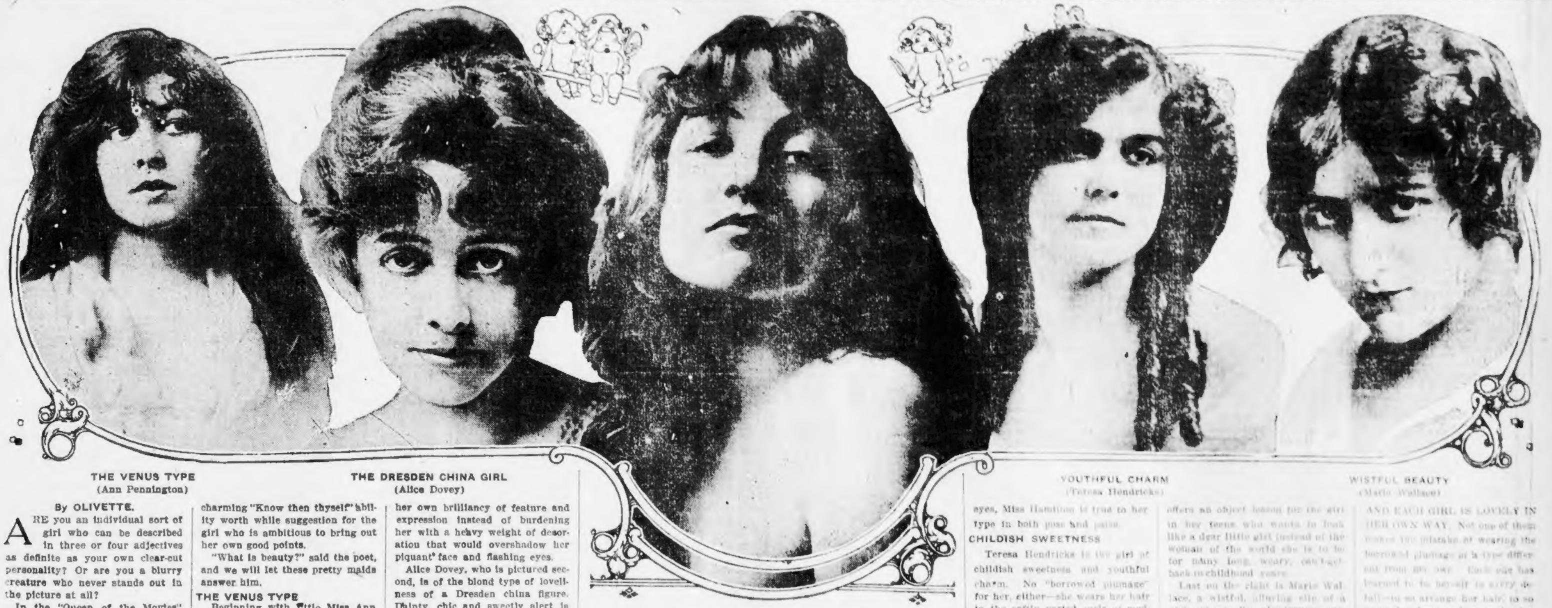
What Are Your Best Points of Beauty?

A Highly Interesting Article on How to Bring Out and Heighten Your Natural Beauty Without the Aid of "Borrowed Plumage"

Posed Especially on This Page by Members of "The Queen of the Movies" Company



THE VENUS TYPE
(Ann Pennington)

THE DRESDEN CHINA GIRL
(Alice Dovey)

THE EXOTIC SOUTHERN TYPE
(Ellise Hamilton)

YOUTHFUL CHARM
(Teresa Hendricks)

WISTFUL BEAUTY
(Marie Wallace)

By OLIVETTE.

ARE you an individual sort of girl who can be described in three or four adjectives as definite as your own clear-cut personality? Or are you a blurry creature who never stands out in the picture at all?

In the "Queen of the Movies" company there are numberless pretty girls who blend into the large picture, but who stand out clearly because each one has learned to bring out her points. Five of them are shown you today, and each one offers in her own charming "Know then thyself" ability worth while suggestion for the girl who is ambitious to bring out her own good points.

"What is beauty?" said the poet, and we will let these pretty maids answer him.

THE VENUS TYPE

Beginning with little Miss Ann Pennington, who is pictured at the left end of the line of loveliness, we have the pocket edition of Venus type. Softly flowing hair, soft draperies of chiffon and a general background of filmy daintiness make this little girl attractive by her own brilliancy of feature and expression instead of burdening her with a heavy weight of decoration that would overshadow her piquant face and flashing eyes.

Alice Dovey, who is pictured second, is of the blond type of loveliness of a Dresden china figure. Dainty, chic and sweetly alert is she. Her softly massed hair, guiltless of wave or ornament, gives her a quaint Old World charm that Greuze himself might have painted. While Miss Pennington is vivid like a hummingbird, Miss Dovey is as sweet as her own name, and neither makes the mistake of trying to wear borrowed plumage.

Next comes Elsie Hamilton, whose beauty is of the exotic Southern type. Her magnolia skin and luxuriant hair and proudly poised head fit her for the richness of Oriental costumes. In the proud carriage of her head and in the half-veiling of her languorous eyes, Miss Hamilton is true to her type in both pose and poise.

CHILDISH SWEETNESS

Teresa Hendricks is the girl of childish sweetness and youthful charm. No "borrowed plumage" for her, either—she wears her hair in the softly parted curls of modest youth and stands gracefully on the brink where "womanhood and childhood" meet. She does not spoil the childish contours of sweet face and girlish figure by striving to imitate the bizarre fashions of our day, and her delightful charm offers an object lesson for the girl in her teens who wants to look like a dear little girl instead of the woman of the world she is to be for many long, weary, can't-get-back-to-childhood years.

Last on the right is Marie Wallace, a wistful, alluring elf of a girl, whose slim slenderness suggests the dear figures Kate Greenaway drew. Her softly parted hair, level brows, modestly carried head and softly molded, softly folded lips suggest the modest Quaker beauty.

Each girl is very lovely indeed—AND EACH GIRL IS LOVELY IN HER OWN WAY. Not one of them makes the mistake of wearing the borrowed plumage of a type different from her own. Each one has learned to be herself in every detail—to so arrange her hair, to so carry her head and to so develop her expression that she shall be a distinctive, charming individual. It will be worth every girl's while to study her own type and to bring it out distinctively in poise and pose. Don't wear "borrowed plumage"—be yourself.

Little Bobbie's Pa

THARE was a vary fine piano player at our house last nite, she had a naim that I cant spell out, it sounded like a French or Italyun naim, it was a long naim. She was a old frend of Ma, so she caim up to play us a few peeces on the piano. Pa doesn't know anything about fine musick, but Ma's frend was a vary butiful woman, & every time she wud git thru playing a peece for us Pa wud shut his eyes & say Superb or he wud say I think that is perfectly Requisite, or sum word like that.

Ma knew that Pa didn't know anything about the fine stuff her fdend was playing, but she didn't want her frend to know that, so she kep still.

You play sublimely, ser Pa. You play with so much feeling of the keys that the tone is different as you strike the different notes, Pa sed. I doant know that I maik myself cleer, he sed, but your playing is so eesy to hear, & eeven a child wud know that you wos playing.

Do you evver compose any littel songs, Ma asked her friend—I cud see that Ma dident want Pa to talk any moar for feer that he wud maik sum mistaik.

I wud have composed sum songs long ago, sed Ma's frend, but I cannot get anybody to rite butiful words to go with my butiful musick. Now here is a melody that I composed myself. & then she played a vary pritty waltz tune. Now if I only had words for that, sad, wailing words, she sed, I wud get the song published.

Is thmat what you want? sed Pa. I am the best sad, wailing word riter that you evver happened to meet. Pardon me a minnit while I have the haunting melody fresh in my mind, & I will rite you a set of words that will exackly fit that melody. You can publish the song in yure own naim, sed Pa, & if you evver maik any munny out of it you can have it all, beckaus I have other ways of maiking mine.

Oh, you American men are so grand, sed Ma's frend. How wunderful of you to tell me that you will help me. I shall await the result o' yure wunderful pen with grate pleshur. So Pa went into the other room.

I think it is perfeckly deer of yure husband to rite a song poem for me, she said to Ma.

Wait till you see it, sed Ma. I have known my husband longer than you have. & after awhile Pa caim in & red this song which he had rote to the musick the lady played for him:

If I had the hart of a crimson rose
  & the eyes of two violets blue
& a brain as vast as a elefant's nose
  I wud give them all to you.
  I wud give them all to you.
If you had the love I have for you
  My gift wud not be in vain,
You wud take them, true, but I know that you
  Wud give them back aggenn,
  Wud give them back again!

Thare you are, sed Pa, what do you think of them words?

I feer I cannot use them words, sed Ma's lady frend. Them words do not seem to fit those melody. & Ma laffed at Pa.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Ruled by Her Sympathies When She Engages a Stenographer for Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"BY Jove, I forgot those stenographers were coming this morning! I've got to be in court by eleven."

"And you wrote them to call before twelve!" remonstrated Helen.

"Can't help it. They'll have to come back again. I'll leave word with the office boy."

"Dear, that isn't fair—to ask those poor girls to spend their time and carfare that way."

"That's right," admitted Warren. "But what can I do? Look here," suddenly, "what's the matter with you going down there and seeing them?"

"You picked out the letters. Know as much about 'em as I do."

"But the work—your requirements? How could I tell about"—

"Just general office work. Give them a test letter if you want to; you can tell if they can get it down and copy it all right."

Helen protested that she was not competent to interview these girls, but in his usual masterful way Warren swept aside all her objections, and insisted on her being there by eleven.

"Now pick a sensible looking one—not the frowsy-haired, gum-chewing kind," as he started off. "Not too much face powder, either, and no scent."

Hurriedly Helen made out her order for the grocer, telephoned the butcher, left some information with Nora and by a quarter after ten was dressed for the street.

When she reached Warren's office it was with a pleasant feeling of importance, and of intense interest for the interview before her.

Fortunately she had read a magazine story not long ago in which a woman detective, posing as a stenographer, secured a position with a lawyer, suspected of drawing up a fraudulent will. And Helen remembered vividly just how the lawyer had interviewed the supposed stenographer.

She found two young women already waiting. Asking which one had come first, she showed her into Warren's private office.

"Mr. Curtis was very sorry that he had to be at court this morning," Helen explained, almost apologetically, "so he has asked me to see you."

The girl, who seemed very nervous, looked surprised.

THE FIRST.

"Oh, yes, I was three years with Talbert and Moore. They never give written references, but you can phone them about my work."

After a few more questions that Warren had suggested about filing, indexing and familiarity with law work, Helen asked rather hesitatingly:

"Would you mind taking a short letter? I think you'll find a note book and pencil here," opening a drawer of the typewriter desk.

Helen knew that Warren dictated rather fast, but as she saw the girl's hand tremble she read the letter slowly. It was a short letter that Warren had left out on the desk for her to use as a test.

When the girl went to the machine to transcribe her notes, Helen looked over some papers, so that she would not feel she was being watched.

She was a good typist, for the letter was well typed and spaced, the only mistakes being a couple of typographical ones, due to nervousness.

On the back of the letter Helen made a note of the girl's name and address, her experience, and her own impression about her: Neat, willing, appropriately dressed."

"There're a few others I must see before engaging any one," murmured Helen, embarrassedly, "but I have your address, and will let you know."

The girl looked disappointed. She had plainly hoped for a decision.

As she went out the office boy, who was much interested in the proceedings, promptly ushered in the next applicant.

With the first glance Helen knew that she did not like this girl. Just the way she sat down and looked about showed her assertiveness. She plainly resented Helen, and did not trouble to conceal it.

But her experience and her references were excellent. She took the letter, which Helen purposely dictated rather fast, without a sign of nervousness, and transcribed it quickly and accurately. There was not even a typographical error, and yet on the back of the letter Helen wrote: "A good stenographer, but think she would be very assertive."

Helen had heard the outer door open and close several times and knew that there were other girls waiting.

The one who entered now was a most frivolous young person with a very large black hat, a very narrow black skirt, quantities of puffed hair and a pert, powdered nose.

NOT DESIRABLE.

"But I—Mr. Curtis didn't answer any letters except from those who'd had experience in legal work," exclaimed Helen puzzled, when the girl admitted that she had never been in a lawyer's office.

"Oh, I was sent by the Blank Employment Agency."

"But how did they know Mr. Curtis wanted a stenographer?" for Warren had spoken of answering no letters from any agency.

"I guess they wrote under some girl's name. They do sometimes."

That this was exactly what had been done was proven by the next three applicants, who admitted they were all from Blank's Agency.

In marked contrast to these young and inexperienced girls, there now entered a woman of about thirty-five. She was small and painfully thin, her rather sharp features angular to the point of gauntness.

The clothes of some of the others had looked worn, yet Helen had not had this impression of desperate need. No, it was not the clothes, and certainly nothing that she said, for her answers were most reserved.

She had had two years' experience in legal work, and many years in wholesale hardware. She took the letter and transcribed it accurately. She said or did nothing different from the others, and yet, from the moment she entered, Helen had felt the air charged with a curious tenseness.

When she gave her name, Agnes Middleton, Helen remembered her letter. It had been one of the best. And now, as she repeated the set phrase about having to "see one or two others," the woman dropped her eyes and Helen saw that her hands were clenched.

"Wait." Helen opened her purse, "you won't be offended if I give you your carfare? It must take a great deal if one goes to many places."

Besides a couple of bills, there was only a fifty cent piece and three pennies in Helen's purse. She handed the woman the half dollar.

"No," drawing back with a deep flush. "I—I haven't any change."

Then suddenly, to Helen's astonishment and dismay, she turned away, buried her face in her hands and burst into tears.

It was an embarrassing moment. Helen stood awkwardly by the desk not knowing what to do or say. But quickly Miss Middleton recovered herself, her sobs ceased as suddenly as they had come.

"I wouldn't have broken down before a man," she murmured, as she turned toward the door.

"No—no, wait!" tensely. "Are you—have things been very hard?"

The woman nodded. She could not trust herself to speak.

"Tell me," Helen insisted. "You can tell a woman, you know."

She hesitated a moment and then said simply.

"I spent my last five cents to come here. I was going to walk back."

Little by little Helen got the story from her. She has been a stenographer since she was eighteen, and had references from everywhere she had worked. But now—well, every one wanted younger and more attractive girls. And this had been a hard Winter. All the big firms were laying off help. The employment agencies and typewriter offices were crowded with applicants. There were a hundred girls for every position—and always the more attractive and prosperous-looking ones were engaged. For the last six months she had had only two weeks of substitute work.

She had sold or pawned everything and was now living in a six dollar a month hall room, getting her meals on an alcohol stove. She had decided to try for one more day, and then—well, there was always the Harbor.

She told the story simply, with no note of melodrama. It was merely a sordid, grim story of a woman's struggle in a big city.

Helen was appalled. She was frightened, terrified. She had never come in touch with this phase of life. She had, of course, seen the sensational newspaper headings of women who had committed suicide because they could not find work. But they had been only newspaper headings, and she had thought them colored and exaggerated, if not wholly untrue.

But here was the grim reality. She knew too that this woman had had no intention of telling this story. There had been no appeal to her sympathies, and there was none now.

The office boy opened the door and looked in inquiringly.

"There are others waiting to see you," apologetically, and again she started to go. "I'm afraid I've taken too much of your time."

Again Helen stopped her.

"Wait," slipping into her shabby hand a two-dollar bill. "I am sure you can do Mr. Curtis's work. Go back to your room and rest. Get a good, nourishing dinner, a good breakfast, and be down here at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

"No, I'll not tell Mr. Curtis," in answer to her unspoken question. "I know you'd rather I wouldn't. Your work will stand on its merits."

And then to protect her from the curious glances of the others Helen went with her to the outer door and nodded a cheerful, matter-of-fact "Good morning."

AMOUREUSE

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

ACROSS the moon the clouds have softly trailed
  A veil of white.
I ask thee, dear, for but a single rose
  To kiss all night.

Out of a wilderness of roses, one
  Night could not miss
One rose, its ardent petals curling back
  Warm with thy kiss.

One rose of all the world, the gift I crave,
  It is not much.
Yet it would be a worthless favor, dear,
  Save for thy touch.

Do You Know That—

Society has gone a step further in the direction of the simplified wedding. It consists in the presentation of a card, printed in silver and containing a list of all the wedding presents received, to each guest on arrival. The presents themselves are not on view. A great many people enjoy inspecting wedding presents, but the arrangement just described obviates a good deal of trouble.

FORBES' FACTS AND COMMENT ON BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

Finance knows no geographic boundary lines. The whole world, not any one country, is the field open to the business man of today. Capital and men now think nothing of migrating from one part of the globe to another.

* * *

Internationalism is the keynote of the twentieth century. It has been clearly sounded in education, in art, in music, in finance, in commerce and in labor.

* * *

The selection of an American railroad officer to take charge of one of Britain's great railroad systems is the latest illustration of this development.

* * *

In these days of grumbling of dissatisfaction with conditions, of complaint over lack of opportunity, should not this incident fill young men with enthusiasm, with fresh hope, with redoubled determination to deserve success? Does it not beget confidence that merit will conquer? Does it not emphasize that the door of opportunity is wider and more open than ever before.

* * *

It is as true today as it was yesterday and will be tomorrow and many tomorrows thereafter that a good workman must ever and always pass a poor workman.

* * *

The world will still beat a track to the door of the ablest man in his line, even if that line be only the making of mouse-traps.

* * *

Mr. Thornton, of the Long Island Railroad, who goes to England to manage the Great Eastern Railroad, will find the same problems confronting him there as beset railroad managers here. Mounting expenses, repeated labor uprisings for higher wages, endangered dividends, increasing governmental regulation, public hostility and a growing demand for public ownership of all transportation companies—these matters are all as acute, as harassing to railroad managers, as far from final settlement in Britain as they are in America. So, too, are the more mechanical questions of terminal facilities and electrification—the latter a gigantic problem of the not distant future.

* * *

Serious study of railroad conditions abroad and at home compels the conclusion that the tendency is toward nationalization. It may be, as one authority declared several years ago, that the people would move to the very brink of government ownership and then recoil with horror from the prospect. So far the movement is unmistakably gaining momentum.

* * *

The British government has appointed a Royal Commission to conduct an exhaustive inquiry into the [illegible] regarded as the first step toward acquisition of the railroads by the government.

* * *

Have you noticed how often a popular movement in Europe, particularly in Great Britain, crosses the Atlantic and is taken up in this country? Legislative, economic, financial, social and labor innovations there are very apt to be adopted here.

* * *

Were I to venture a prophecy, I would say that, if the British Royal Commission's report paves the way for government ownership, a similar program will be taken up in the United States. I would go even further and hazard the forecast that public ownership of railroads is inevitable in every country. (Please note that I am not discussing the desirability or undesirability of such a development, only its inevitability.)

* * *

Whoever would acquaint himself with the similarity of British and American railroad conditions, difficulties and prospects, should read a volume just issued by the AMERICAN'S special financial correspondent in London, W. R. Lawson, author "American Industrial Problems." In his new work, "British Railways: A Financial and Commercial Survey," Mr. Lawson, who is a recognized authority, covers the whole situation illuminatingly. Let me give selected sentences:

"Our railway companies have never been their own masters, and are becoming less so every year. On the one hand, they cannot satisfy the traders without materially reducing freight rates, which involves wholesale reduction of working expenses, wages included. On the other hand, they cannot satisfy their servants without frequent advances in wages as per the trade union program.

"To this has lately been added a second dilemma. They have to conduct an enormous volume of railway traffic and be responsible for everything that happens to it, while at every turn they are subject to the dictation of their employes.

"Railway managers seem to spend the greater part of their lives in hot water, either parliamentary, disciplinary or financial.

"The vital question of the day for British, and possibly also for American railways, is how long they can be expected to do their work properly, under existing conditions? Sooner or later the discontent of their servants, the grumbling of their customers, the persistent obstruction of the Legislatures and State interference in a multitude of forms must impair their efficiency. If unchecked these evils can have only one end—chaos and heavy loss.

"The railway companies are at present in a very chastened mood. * * * Some of them are said to have even resigned themselves to nationalization.

"The most conservative of railway shareholders can no longer shut his eyes to the tendency of all railway questions and controversies to merge themselves into one comprehensive issue. Wherever they begin or whatever may be their local details, they eventually arrive at the supreme question of the railways and the State. It is useless and even foolish to blink at that any longer.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were still weak when afternoon arrived and most of the leaders in speculation were materially lower than at the end of last week. There had been no rally of consequence since the opening. There was some buying at the end of the first hour, but it did not stem pressure. Later in the day hardly any effort was made by bullish interests to start an advance.

In New York by afternoon there were a few strong stocks. Western Union was up 2⅛, American Telephone 1⅞ and Central Leather 1⅞. Among losses were Erie 1¼, Canadian Pacific 1⅝, Southern Pacific ⅝, Missouri Pacific ½, Reading 1⅞, Lehigh Valley ⅝, New Haven 1, American Can ½, Steel ⅜, Amalgamated 1, American Smelting ⅝, Northern Pacific ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio 1, and Union Pacific 1⅛.

Declines in Boston included Calumet & Hecla 10, Butte & Superior ½, Calumet & Arizona ½, Granby 1, North Butte ⅜, Osceola ½, New Haven ⅝, Boston & Maine ⅝ and Shoe ½. United Fruit was still unchanged and American Telephone was up 1⅞.

WHY PRICES DECLINED.

Prices declined at the opening in New York because Wall street was jarred by the announcement that the Interstate Commerce Commission has further suspended until September 12 the increase of 5 per cent in freight rates asked by eastern roads. There had been hopes that an increase of perhaps 3, if not 5, per cent might be granted the coming spring. Now the fear is spreading that there will be no increase at all. This adds to apprehension existing as to the ability of a number of roads to maintain existing dividend rates.

RAILROADS AFFECTED.

The Interstate Commerce Commission caused a free selling of railroad issues at the start and copper and some other issues felt the effect of it. Demand for stocks was small and selling pressure was heavy. A number of issues sagged a point or more. There was more firmness to the Boston list than to the one in New York, ranged lower locally. Another bear report was that the Carnegie Steel Company had posted notices of wage reductions in its Youngstown mills. The army of the unemployed in New York City is said to number 350,000, and the Federal Industrial Commission is going to investigate. A report from that body will not, however, provide jobs for the idle. Business interests are as much afraid as ever of hostile legislation. Altogether the situation at Washington is the greatest of present bear factors.

TRADERS ARE PESSIMISTS.

Traders as a class held to pessimism and prices declined enough within half an hour to reach many stop orders. Weak holders were weeded out on the decline. The undertone was shaky. Business was active during the first hour, transactions totaling more than 140,000 shares, but the market failed to rally. In the last half of the morning there was no improvement in sentiment and some stocks continued to decline. Reading, Erie, Union Pacific, Amalgamated, Steel and Mexican Petroleum were among the weakest. Western Union was an exception, advancing more than a point.

By midday New York was weak, and among stocks which were a point or more below Saturday's final quotations were Amalgamated, American Locomotive, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, St. Paul, Consolidated Gas, Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Reading, Union Pacific and Steel. Atchison, New York Central and Utah Copper were off nearly a point. Chino was the only prominent copper to get support and it was up a point.

Outside of the Interstate Commerce action, railroad statistics were gloomy. Returns for December from eighty-seven roads showed a decrease in gross of 4.62 per cent. and in net of 18.27 per cent. This compares with a decrease in gross for November of 3.67 per cent. and in net of 20.45 per cent.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The London copper warrants market was steady today, spot and futures at noon being unchanged from Friday's closing prices. At the close spot was off 6s. 3d. and futures 5s. 9d.

The Cambria Steel Company reports for 1913 its most prosperous year. Gross earnings were $7,570,976, an increase over 1912 of $3,341,361, and net earnings, $6,688,530, or $2,317,178 higher than 1912.

Foreign fortnightly statistics report that the visible copper supply in England, France and afloat increased 365 tons up to February 16, while metal at Rotterdam, Hamburg and Bremen decreased 487. The net decrease was 122 tons.

LAUDS AMERICA FOR ANSWERING BULGARIA'S CRY

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The following letter from William Casher, a member of the American relief committee on Bulgaria, consisting of American citizens residing in that country and formed to distribute aid to the refugees, Queen Eleonore being its president, was received by the London bureau of the AMERICAN:

SOFIA, Feb. 9.—I feel very proud, as an American citizen, that the Hearst papers have started this propaganda for the relief of the Bulgarian refugees. America has always been foremost in its response to the call of charity and this is an occasion where that response is fully justified.

At the present time the condition of the refugees is critical. I cannot urge too strongly the great need there is for financial aid, but the motto will have to be "haste" if the lives of these unfortunates are to be saved.

The Winter here is severe. As I am writing, the thermometer registers several degrees below zero. Many deaths are occurring daily as the results of starvation, exposure and cold. Added to this, as a result of the crowding together, sickness is breaking out; many cases of scarlet fever and typhoid have been recorded.

Altogether the picture is one beggaring description. Food, clothing and shelter are needed immediately to save lives and future provision must be made for housing this great mass of people who have lost everything in their great struggle for freedom and liberty.

I am sure the response to the appeal will be generous. I wish the AMERICAN every success in its philanthropic work.

A letter was received also from Dr. Ralph O'Leary, head of the British Red Cross Society, in which he says: "If you are sending any funds, send them direct to the Queen. She is the head of all charitable missions out here."

EASTERN RATES NOW SUSPENDED UNTIL SEPT. 12

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Freight tariffs of Eastern railroads, naming a horizontal advance of 5 per cent, which were suspended from November 12 until March 15, by the Interstate Commerce Commission for the purpose of investigating the reasonableness of the advance, were suspended further today until September 12.

Commissioner Clark of the commission explained that the decision of the commission in postponing the rate increase was made mandatory by shippers who had expressed a desire to place before the commission the situation respecting their individual commodities in order to show exactly how a 5 per cent. increase in rates would affect them.

"Pending the hearing of these individual cases," said Mr. Clark, "of course no action could be taken which contemplated a decision. As these hearings will be advanced into the month of March, and as the railroads and the commission's attorneys then will want a chance to sum up the final results of these hearings, it was seen that it would be an impossibility for the commission to reach a decision by March 15.

"It will take several months beyond this date before anything can be reviewed by the commission, so a tentative date of September 12 was by which it is hoped a decision can be reached."

To Test Your Wit

SOLVING THESE PUZZLE PICTURES

$4000 ALL CASH PRIZES

$1000 FIRST PRIZE

It is not a difficult task. Everything is made easy for you. The pictures merely represent Titles of Books, Songs, etc., not anything in the Book or Song. You are not asked to buy any Book or Catalog of titles, either. This information is printed in list given each week in the Sunday American, and the correct answers to all pictures will be found in these weekly lists. If the correct answer to any picture does not occur to you at once all you have to do is refer to this list of names, and there is your answer for you. The prizes are big—and all cash. The fun of the thing is immense. The whole family will enjoy it, so why not Start Right Now? Send for any pictures you need and the official Answer Lists and make an effort to earn that $1,000. Isn't it worth trying for?

BOSTON AMERICAN

Hold all answers until you have the entire set. No answers will be considered if sent in before the publication of the last picture.

The Contest Plan

Each day for 75 days, commencing Sunday, Jan. 4th, the Boston American will print a picture representing the name or title of a song, book, poem, explorer, play, proverb, river or lake, or other appropriate subject.

$4,000 in cash prizes will be awarded to the 155 competitors who send in the largest number of correct answers.

There will be no catalogue or book of titles to buy. The American will furnish this information absolutely free to contestants by publishing each week in the Sunday American an official list of names or titles, among which will be found the CORRECT answers to the pictures to be used during the week commencing with each Sunday publication.

The Church Federation Committee's Report on Recent Labor Troubles Is a Timely Warning—Read It

The Massachusetts Federation of Churches appointed a committee to consider "the situation revealed by recent strikes." That committee has reported. Its report is a sound analysis of a bad situation revealed in those strikes and a clear warning against some dangerous practices which grew out of them. The report says:

> We have long known the evils which have resulted from absent landlordism. We are now learning that the same evils arise from absent capitalism. The great mills of Lawrence, it is said, are almost wholly owned by non-residents.
>
> We must insist that ignorance or indifference by absence from the scene of conflict is no excuse. Such shifting of responsibility upon foremen or agents is moral shirking of responsibility.
>
> The first condition for social life is order. The working people must learn that recourse to violence in their industrial conflict will bring upon them the condemnation of public opinion and the authority of the law, backed by the force of the State.
>
> On the other hand, it is of the utmost importance that the State proceed in its relation to industrial crises through its accredited agents according to the due proces of law. Anarchy is anarchy when practiced by the authorities or self-appointed citizens just as much as when it is practiced by the labor organizations.

This is one of the most statesmanlike pronouncements which has been recently published. It goes to the heart of a portentous evil in this community.

Men refused to submit to an attempt of certain mill owners to nullify the effect of a new law reducing the hours of labor by reducing wages in their mills. A strike followed. The strikers were ignorant foreigners—Italians, Poles, Greeks and other elements of the recent immigration. They could not speak our language, they knew nothing of our institutions, they were working for wages far below American standards and it was their very ignorance of American conditions which enabled their employers to work them at such pitiful wages.

When these men revealed an ability to organize and to stand together which amazed and frightened their employers, the local authorities, and even the State police, were utilized by the employers, under the pretense of repressing violence, to deprive the workmen of the leadership which organized them and guided them to victory. The leaders were recklessly accused of murder and thrown into prison without bail and put in jeopardy of their lives.

It took a staunch jury and an honest Superior Court judge to save Ettor and Giovannitti from being murdered under the forms of law, to the eternal mockery of our boasted liberty and equality.

The little children of the strikers were their source of weakness. Fuel and food began to give out and leaders of the workmen knew that the mothers and fathers could not long watch the suffering of their children. The employers knew also that this was the point where the fortitude of the parents would be most likely to break down. Therefore, when with the consent of the parents, it was attempted to take these little children temporarily to homes "where beyond these troubles there was peace," the mill owners used the local police to prevent their departure.

It was a scheme of reconcentration as brutal as Weyler ever practiced in Cuba or Russia in Siberia, and without half the authority of law. Not only were the mothers prevented from putting their children on board trains, but they were clubbed by the policemen without respect to their physical condition.

Again, during another strike at Ipswich, a group of defenceless men, women and children were shot up by local constables, some of whom were especially authorized for the occasion and some of whom had bad personal records. A woman was killed in this inexcusable assault and the authorities had the audacity and brutality to arrest one of the strike leaders for murder of this woman. He was discharged when it became apparent that the bullet which killed her was fired from an officer's revolver. The authorities pretended that this attack upon the strikers was in self-defence, yet not a single one of the officers received even a scratch and a dozen or more of the strikers, including women and boys, were shot and clubbed.

These workmen were also poor Greeks and Poles, in whose protection too few of our citizens are interested. But they are human beings who have entrusted themselves to our care and came among us in reliance upon our free institutions. They are entitled to justice from our public authorities and to the protection of the law. Those who sneer at them and are indifferent to their rights should remember that their children will soon be citizens, and also that what is done to them may some day be a precedent which will justify the same kind of lawlessness against ourselves.

The report of this committee of the federated churches ought to be spread broadcast. It is a timely warning aginst a real danger.

It is a singular fact that in one of the mills the family of one of the most distinguished churchmen in this community is said to be a large stockholder. Let the churches take up this important question and awaken the moral sense of the community. It can do no better work.

SYMPATHETIC WOMAN

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

SITTING together, at the restaurant,
  I chanced to speak of hunting. And I told
With primitive man pride, how once a gaunt
  And savage wolf, by hunger's pangs made bold,
Had tested all my courage in the strife.
  I saw her sweet face sadden; then she cried:
"How could you, O, how could you take the life
  Of any creature? God's earth is so wide,
Is there not room for all things? Is there not
  Pleasure enough beneath the glorious sun
For man to find diversion in his lot
  Without the aid of cruel hook or gun?"

She was a thing of beauty to the eyes.
  Silent I sat and noted all her grace.
Decked with a slaughtered Bird of Paradise
  Her small fair head, and lovely girlish face
Rose from a snowy mass of priceless fur,
  Headed and tailed, a muff lay in her lap;
Young kids had died to clothe the hands of her;
  A score of skins made lining for her wrap.

She breathed destruction of dumb living things
A splendid bird has given life and wings
  And harmless beasts their blood to make her fair.
I passed the menu, asking for her choice.
  There were a hundred dainties to beguile;
She glanced them over: then in silvery voice,
  Fish, fowl and flesh she ordered with a smile.

Woman's Triumph in Chicago

By DR. JULIA HOLMES SMITH

[illegible] women registered at the polls in Chicago on the opening day. The day's registration of men totalled 85,162. Suffragist leaders expect that 100,000 more women will join the list on the final registration day, and that the full vote of 250,000 will be cast at the Aldermanic election April 6. Last year about 3,000 women qualified to vote for university trustees before the passage of the Suffrage act. One of the foremost Suffrage leaders in Chicago here tells of their long fight and victory.

IN the hour of our settled triumph, as we approach the ballot box for the first time, the women of Chicago and the women of Illinois must not forget the debt of gratitude they owe to William Randolph Hearst, whose championship of the cause of woman's suffrage for thirty years has done more than anything else to bring about their enfranchisement.

Long before Mr. Hearst became a great editor it was my privilege to enjoy a pleasant acquaintance with Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, his mother. She was an ardent advocate of "woman's rights," and we discussed that subject frequently and with great sympathy. When in the after years her son became the first influential man to adopt and advocate our cause I realized that she had brought up her boy well.

Thirty years ago Mr. Hearst began, in San Francisco, his first crusade in the interest of the political equality of the sexes. It was in the San Francisco Examiner that the cause was presented with so much conviction, force and truth. As his influence extended and he founded other papers the appeal for woman's suffrage was reiterated with that peculiar zeal which is one of the distinguishing characteristics of Mr. Hearst's newspapers everywhere.

Then, fourteen years ago, he established his two papers in Chicago and began the fight for "votes for women" in this city. He galvanized the suffrage movement into life. We must not forget that at that time there was not one paper in the city or State that was in our favor. There was no power of any magnitude behind us except Mr. Hearst and his newspapers, and there was not a single politician in our favor—scarcely one who received the woman's suffrage suggestion without a laugh or a shrug.

Today the women of California, where Mr. Hearst took up the fight thirty years ago, have the privilege of the ballot. In Illinois, where the fight has been hard and fast for fifteen years, we have just come into our own. One hundred and fifty-three thousand women have registered. At the end of the month we shall cast our first vote—in the Aldermanic primaries. In five years surely, perhaps sooner, the constitution of this State will have been amended so that women will have equal rights with men.

Without Mr. Hearst's wonderful championship, without his zeal for our cause, without his wonderful fighting qualities exercised in our behalf, we should not be on the poll books of Chicago today.

All honor then, to the man who has blazed the trail for us, and to his dear mother, who instilled into his heart and mind the doctrines that he made his own when he was yet a little boy.

❧ ❧ Sleighing ❧ ❧

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WHEN there's sleighing in the country with the wagons turned to sleighs,
  And the jingling, jangling sleighbells bringing thoughts of other days,
When the creaking wheels no longer test the strength of patient steeds,
When the oracle is saying, "This is what the farmer needs,"
Then it is that real enjoyment comes to many a jaded heart,
Then you watch the sports of children, now to you a thing apart.
As you, too, were wont to revel ere your sorrows had begun.

There is pleasure in the city, pleasure of another sort,
Dancing between dinner courses, cabarets and hectic sport;
Rich men strive, gay women struggle, for one solitary thrill
Of the joy they used to squander when they coasted down a hill.
Vain, all vain, their mad endeavors to be happy for an hour;
Happiness eludes their fingers, sneering at their wealth and power.
Millions cannot buy the pleasure found along the drifted ways
When there's sleighing in the country, with the wagons turned to sleighs.

The Anger of the Gods

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN.

Q.—"What is your opinion of the account of electrical displays as being interpreted to indicate the anger of the gods of the sea and storms of rain as read in Homer's Odyssey in the chapter, 'Ulysses in the land of the Cyclops'?"

A.—All these accounts, filling hundreds of pages of books on classical antiquity, are based on the very ancient and remarkable trait of the early races of the earth, known as personification. This habit is prehistoric and is well worthy the careful study of all mentonomists.

Max Muller, in his admirable books on Aryan mythology, tells of the wonderful Maruts, or storm gods, who lived and wrought amid the colossal peaks of the Himalayas.

Storm gods in the mountains have ever been the inspiration of some of the world's best poetry, and of fascinating legends in that literary storehouse, Asiatic, Egyptian and classic mythology. And, by the way, many students are now looking beyond the Aryans, beyond the Egyptians, beyond all Greek, Minoans and Latins, to a vast civilization antedating their most ancient histories—looking to now sunken Poseid.

All phenomenain nature, such as lightning, outbursts of rain, hail and snow in summits and ranges of peaks, all marshaling of huge mountain clouds for elemental war—earthquakes, cyclones, hurricanes, waterspouts at sea, huge waves beating over land as destroyers, outbursts of sulphurous and asphaltic flames from the earth, apparitions in the sky, as meteors, fireballs, bolides, comets, eclipses of the sun and moon—these all were supposed to be caused by an intelligence ruling each, and they were persons higher than man and called gods.

Nature assumes so many phases and aspects that their pantheons became elaborate and complex. Read any classical dictionary and it will be seen in many instances that heroic exploits are those of these gods of nature personified as men and women, gods and goddesses.

At the Chicago registration Mrs. John F. Bass and Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, suffragist leaders, made the male politicians look like minnows.

The Revival of Dancing—It Is Absurd to Condemn the Tango and Other Modern Dances Just Because the Name Sounds Risque.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

DANCING is an expression of joy in life.

As far back as history reaches we find dancing associated with religious rites.

Dancing comprises all the other arts.

A beautiful dancer expresses poetry, music, sculpture, painting, all in the dance.

Besides being the most beautiful of all arts, it is the most healthful of all exercises, when enjoyed under right conditions.

Besides being the most healthful, it is the most moral of exercises.

Young people who are given training in dancing and allowed to dance frequently in clean, wholesome environments and under wise chaperons utilize surplus vitality, which, when suppressed by rigid rules or bigoted ideas, ofttimes results in mischief and disaster.

Take the old fashioned religious communities where dancing is regarded as a sin and there are always to be found numerous cases of hysteria among the young girls and various maladies among the youths. No proper outlet for their superabundant young vital forces has been provided, no escape valve.

Little children dance before they have ever seen dancing; little kittens, and little puppies, and all small animals dance with the joy of existence.

The waves of the sea, the leaves of the trees, the grasses of the meadow—all dance. The sunbeams dance; and light itself is ever in motion.

The man and woman who have never learned the joy to be experienced in dancing have missed a great happiness.

And they have missed a means of physical grace.

For a decade, at least, before the tidal wave rose, young men fled from ballrooms and left girls to find partners among themselves.

The woman who had passed thirty apologized if she was seen dancing; and married people were afraid to express a love for the diversion lest they be ridiculed.

Then sudenly a change; an awakening of dull minds; a limbering of stiff joints, new life in bored faces; new interest in the oldest of all arts.

The dance was reborn. And youth was reborn in the hearts and bodies and minds of men and women of all ages.

Grotesque, abnormal, unbeautiful and even vicious were the early contortions of this reborn art. It seemed like some strange creature which had been shut in the dark so long that it became half insane when let forth once more into the full light of day.

So cramped had it been with its incarceration that it flung itself about in curious contortions to make certain of its freedom.

But those contortions are now becoming graceful movements; and the insane expressions of liberty are resolving themselves once more into the primal meaning of the dance—the joy of life.

Nothing more absurd, nothing more unreasonable, could be than the ban placed by various individuals on dances bearing certain names.

One sees flaming headlines announcing that somebody in power, socially or otherwise, has sent forth an edict against the "tango" or some other new dance.

As reasonable would it be to decry walking because it is possible to walk indecently.

As reasonable would it be to brand music as an agent of the devil because music has been put to evil purposes by the vicious minded. There were certain curious dances, which sprung forth like fungus growths, and lasted for a night and a day, bearing unligious dances.

The "Turkey trots" deserved to be tabooed; more particularly because of the suggestion of the barnyard, and the most ungraceful of fowls, than for its own inherent wickedness. It was vulgar rather than wicked. Dancing is an art; and should suggest only the artistic and the beautful. It belongs with perfumes, with flowers, with statuary and music; with gladness and rejoicing.

Long ago, in Eastern lands, devout and reverent souls danced songs to the rising sun; and today in these lands there are dancers in the temples who devote their lives to sacred rites, and who live purely and sweetly that they may be worthy in the eyes of ther Creator to perform the religous dances.

There are moral-minded men and women who have associated every evil meaning with the word tango.

Yet the tango is graceful, artistic and beautiful, as the minuet, when properly danced.

It is as innocent of anything injurious to the morals of the young as skipping the rope.

Instead of selecting some one or two new dances to decry, our well-meaning moralists should decry indecent attitudes or suggestive movements in all dancing.

The same moralists make no protest against the watlz and two-step.

Yet both of these dances can be made quite as objectionable as any of the most modern inventions if the participants so wish.

When the waltz was first introduced in the ballroom it created as great excitement and as violent protests as the modern dances are creating. Lord Byron, who was debarred from the pleasure by lameness, exhausted his vocabulary of invective against the immoral waltz.

Let us be sensible and reasonable. The dance is reborn; and it must live its life. It must do its work. It must be met as a factor in social life. Instead of attempting to crush it, or abolish it; instead of saying to our young people, "You must not learn any of the new dances; they are indecent," let us say, "Learn all the new dances, but be modest, decent, graceful and well behaved on the dancing floor.

"Dance only with your friends, and in the environment which is respectable and safe from intrusion of the undesirable. Show all observers how beautiful a thing dancing may be."

And to our older people let us offer hearty congratulations that they no longer need apologize or explain when owning to a love of the art of all arts.

❧ The Art of Long Life ❧

By EDWIN MARKHAM

LUIGI CORNRA, of Italy, who lived to be one hundred and two years old, has for nearly five hundred years been an object lesson to the world as an example of the power of plain living and serene thinking. Under the name of "The Art of Living Long," a biography of this Venetian gentleman, together with much other interesting matter concerning him and his teachings, has been issued. Observe this extract, as true today as in the fifteenth century:

"I shall now set forth in writing the cause which induced me to abandon my intemperate habits, and to embrace the orderly and temperate life. The excesses of my past life, together with my bad constitution, had caused me to fall a prey to various ailments, such as pains in the stomach, frequent pains in the side, symptoms of gout, and, still worse, a low fever that was almost continuous.

"After every known means of cure had been tried, without affording me any relief, I was, between my thirty-fifth and fortieth years, reduced to so infirm a condition that my physicians declared that there was but one remedy which would surely conquer the ills, provided I would make up my mind to apply it and preserve patiently in its use. That remedy was the temperate and orderly life.

"After I had once taken a firm resolution that I would henceforth live temperately and rationally, and had realized, as I did, that to do so was not only an easy matter, but, indeed, the duty of every men, I entered upon my new course so heartily that I never afterward swerved from it, nor ever committed the slightest excess in any direction. Within a few days I began to realize that this new life suited my health excellently; and persevering in it, in less than a year—though the fact may seem incredible to some—I found myself entirely cured of all my complaints.

"I have also preserved myself, as far as I have been able, from those other disorders from which it is more difficult to be exempt; I mean melancholy, hatred and other passions of the soul, which all appear greatly to affect the body."
